THE NEW USE OF THE ELIZABETH SOMERS MEMORIAL CHAPEL

"It is most gratifying to announce to Metropolitan Church members that beginning on January 4th, 1931, the services of the Church will be held in the Chapel of Mount Vernon Seminary, Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues. The Faculty of this historic school, through Miss Cole, the Head Mistress, has most graciously extended the invitation to unite with them and the Student Body in their Sunday services while the new Metropolitan Church is under construction. The Chapel has been recently built; it is colonial in architecture with every churchly appointment including a splendid Skinner organ. This hospitality has come to us as a splendid privilege and one that the Pastor and congregation thoroughly appreciate. We are reminded too, that the founder of this school was Mrs. Elizabeth Somers, sister of Reverend Dr. Thomas Eddy, third Pastor to serve Metropolitan Church. Mrs. Somers for a number of years was a member of Metropolitan; her memory throughout Washington is a blessed one. The services will be held as usual at eleven o'clock in the lovely Elizabeth Somers Memorial Chapel."

REV. DR. JAMES SHERA MONTGOMERY.

These were the words of Dr. James Shera Montgomery of the National Methodist Church on the last Sunday in December in the farewell service in the old church. It seemed to us an opportunity to be of service to the community, and a service that was particularly fitting that we should pay. We had many associations with the Metropolitan Methodist Church. First of all, Mrs. Somers' brother was the pastor of the church and for many years Mrs. Somers presided over a men's Bible class of a hundred members. Miss Walker's father was the contractor under whom the church was built; Miss Guard's father and Miss Ames' father preached in its pulpit. Thus it was to us a most fitting thing that our chapel should open its doors to receive them in their hour of need. It has proved a very happy arrangement as our girls voted to unite with them in the morning service, and our choir has furnished the music. The Vice-President of the United States, who is a member of the congregation, has repeatedly expressed his appreciation of the beautiful ministry of music, as have other prominent members of the congregation.

Their beautiful new Gothic structure is on Nebraska Avenue, two blocks from the school and will be ready for occupancy in the early fall.

THE COLLEGIATE DIVISION

It is always a source of peculiar satisfaction to an educational institution when it finds it possible not only to pursue steadily and courageously that policy which seems to it right and forward-looking, but also to have the wisdom and value of its policy vindicated by the results, in the progress made by students in their Alma Mater and in the recognition which their work receives in higher institutions after graduation.

Such satisfaction is ours increasingly. The "new curriculum," which at first, especially in the case of Survey of Civilization and World Literature courses, presented difficulties of evaluation to committees on advanced standing in colleges which did not give parallel courses, has now its counterpart in other institutions, and constructive innovations within Junior Colleges are every year regarded with more respect and favor by those Senior Colleges eager to improve the type of student accepted and to recognize intellectual power and excellent training in independent thinking. A study now being made by Dr. Koos, of Chicago University, a National Survey of Secondary Education, in which we are participating, is making a special inquiry as to significant changes and improvements in organization, in curricula offered, in student guidance and student activities, in order that such information may be more widely disseminated and produce greater interest in such directions.

Stanford University, has recently accepted two of our 1929 graduates, one as a Junior and the other as a Senior; the University of California at Berkeley took one of our Juniors this year (a one-year student) giving her approximately 29 of the 30 credits she needed for Sophomore standing, and has evaluated the record of a 1931 Senior with 50 semester hours of university credits; Mills College, Scripps, and Northwestern University, all admitted 1927, 1929, and 1930 girls with full Junior standing; the University of Arizona and Michigan State College have this year taken one-year Mount Vernon Seminary girls as full Sophomores; and other colleges and universities widely scattered are manifesting their confidence in the type and thoroughness of training afforded able students here.

SOME GENTLE PERSUASIONS TOWARD READING

One very real task that confronts every teacher of English is that of cultivating a taste for reading in her students—confided to her charge for some fifty minutes out of each fleeting day. How, she asks herself in her least sanguine moments, is the miracle to be wrought—for the “reading that maketh a full man” is not to be crowded into the nooks and corners of a day brimful of conflicting distractions? What will give to habit of reading a real savour—in a rather jaded world where wearied people, in need of a tonic, complacently swallow the latest prescription of the Book-of-the-Month-Club?

Friendliness toward books is like friendliness toward people—a plant of slow growth, needing some time to root, to wax strong, and to put forth blossoms. Too many readers exaggerate their own capacities. They would count their conquests, “not in single spies but in battalions.” To read too avidly amidst the pressure of the present-day world, argues a sort of stupidity, instead of the superior intelligence that it is supposed to imply. Children sometimes realize this with surer instinct than their elders. In his reading the child is often "father to the man," for though he goes not far afield in his excursions, he knows every little hedge and byway in his chosen plot. Children read and reread the books that they love. Book people take on for them a peculiar vividness—book places are actual haunts of refuge or adventure. Many of us cherish more precious intimacies with the books of our childhood than we are ever able to cluster about a book again—and we may well go to the naive reader for a suggestion as to a proper approach to literature.

I am often reminded of an incident told me by a former pupil who became an aviator in the Great War. His life was one of breathless activity. On one occasion, his plane was brought to earth and there was nothing for him to do but sit down mid the shattered fragments and wait for relief. In his pocket he had a copy of "The Three Musketeers." This he read and read, and finally was conscious of murmuring half audibly, "Heavens, what exciting days those must have been!" Here indeed was a true reader—one for whom "the right word and the right accent," so reverently spoken of by Conrad, were indeed potent.

To enlarge one's experience by so completely entering into another experience is indeed a good incentive to reading. The game, though, will not be worth the candle if the reading be forced, or desultory, or if it lacks the magic combination of qualities in the book and the reader to consummate the miracle. Moments of exaltation in reading are all too rare—and they become more rare, as people confuse their notions of reading and succumb to ulterior motives which can reduce one of the greatest of pleasures to something distinctly and disturbingly tawdry.

A satiated curiosity grows too weak to endure delights. One glance at a page of book reviews, one turn about the crowded aisles of a book shop, one breathless attempt to keep up with the chatter about the latest "best seller" will convince the most skeptical of the dangers of satiation. Our only salvation, if we would enjoy books, is to seek some place where the bliss of solitude still has reality, and to make a choice of the books that will please us. Then can we indulge in a somewhat leisurely perusal of them.

People's reasons for reading differ as widely as do people. A reader's temperament dictates the kind of satisfaction he seeks—his capacity measures the amount of it that he will find. It is almost axiomatically said that a thing worth doing is worth doing well. Nowhere is this more applicable than to reading. If it be diversion that one seeks, let him go after it intelligently and absorb it completely. To cover a hundred pages and put the book down with a yawn would indicate that other forms of diversion would be more wisely turned to. If it be knowledge that he seeks, let him go at that avidly, and he will count among his blessings such books as satisfy his thirst. If a reader would cure himself by a sedative or a stimulant, he will find, among his books, sure remedies for his ailing spirit. Only let him see to it that he read to satisfy his needs, and not to live up to somebody else's notions of culture and refinement. Many people are potential readers who have so far been kept from the sources of pleasure that are to be found in books—but the self-reliant person will finally lead himself to the springs of satisfaction, and they will seem to him the more refreshing because he has been the discoverer. The reader, it seems to me, must erect his own standards of taste. No one can really define the good or the bad for some one else. But as one reads increasingly, he will come to see with a surprising clearness of vision. As one becomes a self-indulgent reader—reading for the sheer joy that books can give, the habit of reading will begin to create an awareness within him. Unsuspected canons of taste will begin to shape themselves spontaneously. It is like making frequent excursions into a wood, where at first one is but vaguely aware of sylvan beauty. The freshness of color, the fragrance of the forest, the eerie sounds that break in upon the stillness—all harmonize pleasantly enough—but as one goes into the wood again and again, the eye begins to catch sight of the tiniest growing thing and the ear begins to distinguish even the echoes of woodland sounds. The practiced woodsman instinctively knows secrets that the casual wanderer through forest glades will never guess. So it is in reading. As one becomes more and more engrossed, little subtleties begin to have reality, and the standards of taste begin to be an essential element of the reading experience.

Quite definite changes seem to occur when a reader emerges from a state in which he takes his reading youthfully and joyously, and enters into that maturer state in which he assumes a more critical attitude. The young reader is like the character in Conrad's delightful tale, "The Shadow Line," who in assuming the command of a ship crosses an imperceptible barrier between youth and maturity. At a quite definite point in his reading life, the youth abandons the pleasures of vicarious experience through books. He feels himself to be growing up. There stirs within him a vague awareness that he ought to be like certain things, for which he does not as yet feel any deep affinity. His reach may for a long time elude his grasp—but the "do or die" spirit of youth bids him strain toward what he conceives as good. And all at once the thing that was difficult becomes easy, the thing that was strange becomes familiar, the thing that was unlovely turns into a thing of beauty. The delight in reading changes, not in intensity alone, but in kind, as do all delights for the person whose youth has been quite definitely left behind. Thus in reading, the youthful experience must be acquired fervently, with zest and with ardour—but once acquired it will melt into a richer experience—made richer through a leisurely and pleasurable contemplation. The compensation that the mature reader gets for his loss of freshness is approach, is this fuller, contemplative point of view that does form his critical standards and bring him the golden rewards of his reading hours.

It seems to me that about all we can do is to give our students some glimpses of the kind of pleasure quite easily within grasp. It is a kind of pleasure as diverse in its aspects as are the students themselves—a kind of pleasure that can lead them on to kindred enthusiasms that will hold out to them further delights. For after the interest in reading is once aroused, it will carry the student far. There will come a love of books for their own sake . . . an interest in printing, in bindings, in early editions. Writers will become his intimates; his travels will turn to pilgrimages, and his days will be made happy by pleasures that were before unguessed and undiscovered.

AGNES DE LANO.

APPRECIATIVE RETROSPECT

People go to school with one of two ideas in mind: either that they are preparing themselves for life, or that they are living vividly as they go along. Either attitude should make what they are doing important: preparation should be done with conscious care; living should be done with conscious zest. Therefore, I lose all patience with people who on finishing school belittle the things they did there.

After all, if to do one sort of thing well at a certain appropriate age is not tremendously important at the time, it should be. If it is important then, and a strong link in the chain of growth, how can it be called unimportant later? While no one may know or care outside school that one won cups or carried off honors there, it is no less important to have done so. It is a symbol of successful adaptation to environment, and as such adaptation seems to be one of the major problems of life, to gain for oneself belief in one's ability to repeat that success in other environments is one of the most important advantages of education.

One of the greatest causes of unhappiness is a sense of defeat, or inability to compete successfully, to do any one thing well enough to gain self-assurance. It is to combat that very attitude that the variety of activities offered by the modern school are valuable. There is a place in them for everyone to perform a part successfully and to form some idea of the fields to which she wishes later to devote her energies. It is in the performance of these activities where those feelings of adequacy and cooperativeness and those attitudes and interests are developed which have incalculable effect on one's course of life.

The satisfaction of decorating the Gym for a Valentine's Party may be transitory; the satisfaction of discovering thereby that one can cooperate or organize, or simply enjoy decorating is far from unsubstantial. The pleasure of seeing one's writing in the Broadside may be outgrown, but the discovery that one has a flair for words, a zest for writing, may lead to endless realms of delight. Years later one may chuckle at the excitement with which one substituted in choir, but it is no mean thing for that to have been one of the first steps in a really serious application to music appreciation. The things that one does in school are not trivial, or scornful, or unimportant; they are like trial clay models of what the bronze will be.

Thus, whether one be conscious of living happily through an eye-opening period, or of building for a far-flung future, what lines one chooses to pursue in school are indices of what the later, hardly-judged ones will be, and may not be lightly put aside. Therefore, I hope M. V. S. will have bigger and better parties, and shows, and papers, and "jobs" for her children, forever; they are mental vitamins.

A COMPARISON OF NORSE AND GREEK MYTHOLOGY AND THEIR EFFECT ON CHRISTIANITY

Senior Essay, written by

ROSANA KILPATRICK, '31.

Religion is undoubtedly one of the deepest instincts in life. Man's beliefs have always held a dominating place in his scheme of existence and entered into all phases of his life. The need for some power beyond himself on whom he can rely in his moments of conscious helplessness, and to whom he can turn for the comfort and protection that life alone will never afford, seems always to have been inherent in man's nature.

Indeed the first stirrings of thought among all primitive peoples have been awakened by man's curiosity about the phenomena of nature. This has led him to form conceptions of the power that must lie beyond the forces which have stimulated his wonder, and he then began to shape his ideas of some definite relationship between the universe and himself.

In seeking answers to his questions, the power of the mortal mind was so taxed that fear of the inexplicable took hold of it. Such phenomena as dreams, death and shadows convinced primitive man that a spirit existed which lived apart from his body. Indeed the savage's conception of life as a concrete material thing that could be kept in a box, led him to suppose that if this spirit remained unimpaired, though in another part of the universe from the body, the body could exist in perfect safety. From this basis of belief in spirits and fear of the all pervading mystery, the savage mind was compelled to question existence and the possibility of another life. Conceiving of himself as possessor of a spirit, he also endowed the phenomena about him with a spirit created in his own image and possessing his own attributes. Once ancestors were deified and spirits allotted to the great phenomena of nature, one has the beginnings of gods which personified the thing man was dependent on. Worship of those spirits which could aid man in gaining what he desired was the next step and polytheism came into being. Through the joining of these gods into groups and weaving stories about their adventures, a system of legends and fables developed which constitutes the mythology of a people.

The mythologies of Norway and Greece are both polytheistic systems of great importance to Teutonic peoples. These two are essentially similar in so far as they derive source through explaining the forces and phenomena of nature. There are visible demonstrations of natural phenomena fundamentally the same throughout the world but differences in interpretation are traceable to differences in environment and in response. Both the Greeks and Norse interpret the forces of nature through personality and invest their deities with many of the same powers. Growing out of this similarity of source one would naturally find gods that personified the same elements, if in a different manner, and were endowed with many of the same attributes. The notions of genesis found in the two systems are developed in much the same way. To both, the nebulous world or all embracing space was considered the first state and from that issued the creation of the universe and its contents.

That two great groups so widely separated and influenced by such vastly different environments should conceive of a creation so basically similar has several explanations. Both the Greeks and the Norse are of the Aryan race and it is possible that before they migrated from their original home they acquired the seeds of a common religion which they later developed under their separate influences. Again systems of mythology might have been interchanged between countries; but the most adequate explanation seems to lie in the fact that human minds are similar before the influences of cultivation begin to make those impressions through which later changes are wrought.

The dissimilarities of these two systems are far greater than the similarities. And in accounting for the differences of interpretation, the greatest influences seem to be geography and climate.

The scenery of Norway combines the gloomy and awe-inspiring. The entire country is one huge imposing rock cut up into small sections, by its valleys through which glacier-fed rivers find their rushing, tumbling way to the sea. These rivers come from afar, now flowing gently through green mountains—meadows dotted with farms and now tumbling madly over tremendous falls with a deafening roar—the majestic snow-capped mountains forming a fitting background for their fleecy cascades. The fjords below into which they fall are deep, dark lakes, mirroring the grandeur of this scene on a surface seldom touched by the rays of the sun.

Norway feels the warmth of the sun for only a short time during the summer. The rest of the year it is icebound. Their struggles with the forces of nature, combined with a dark and brooding atmosphere, would prevent a cheerful attitude among the people.

Geography forced the Norsemen to settle in small tribal communities in which the chieftain ruled over the peasants who tilled the soil. A certain type of feudalism. These chieftains were constantly moving until the time of Harold Fairhair who united them into a single state. Trained by their years of battle they presented a formidable aspect to the distant countries which they now began to attack. Coupled with their desire for war and the sombre climate which produced such difficulties of living, was a nature which forced these people to go far from their lands in search of better living conditions and the riches of other countries which would enable them to exist through their terrible winters.

A general migration to all parts of the world began during the Viking age. One can imagine the chief with his hordes faring forth in summer in boats, striking terror in the hearts of the unfortunate peoples to whose shores they were bound. Tireless in conquest and in war they robbed and burned everything without mercy, returning home again at the beginning of winter. The age was not entirely one of pillage and murder, as the desire to live on a lavish scale and entertain followers and friends was really the urge that drove them on. When they arrived in their country loaded with booty, a winter of banqueting followed, at which they displayed the treasures they had gained and bards wrote sagas to their glory. The chieftain's hall which lives for us typically in such an epic as "Beowulf" was a spacious timbered building, the walls hung with shields. In the middle of the room were fires around which the men sat and beyond them in the darkness, the women. Above all, on a raised seat, the chieftain heard the tales of his followers and the songs of the skald. There was much talking, eating and drinking, the chieftain's daughter pouring the mead for all.

A people who possessed force enough to contend with such a nature and develop such a civilization could not be expected to understand the gentle loving traits of character that Christianity has made the ideal. They couched their problems of human conduct in terms of physical courage, combat and the appetites and the virtues that they recognized were those of strength, loyalty and fidelity.

There were two traits, courage in danger and fearlessness in the face of death that the Norse considered absolutely essential. Their estimation of a people was determined by the degree to which they possessed these two traits. With courage they demanded the ability to curb emotion. Though undemonstrative they loved their family and friends deeply and their devotion to those to whom they had declared fealty became the only object of worthy living. The kin or family, closely bound together by loyalty was the strongest support of the individual. Whatever one member did was answered for by the entire kin. Indeed no Norseman would ever overlook an act that might injure his self-respect or that of his family. He let nothing interfere with his gaining vengeance although he kept firm hold on veracity and fair play.

A people with such clearly defined ethics and such high standards would naturally respect themselves and recognize their individual worth. Their belief in personal liberty and individualism can be seen in modern American society.

"Every nation and every age has its own peculiar standards and its ethical ideas are definitely related to the character and beliefs of the people and the spirit of the time." To understand these people and their conceptions it is necessary to know something of their mythology.

One of the most typical features of the Norse system is the tree Yggdrasil, it shows their sense of unity and comprehension of the order in the universe. Through its creation they gain a force which binds their concepts into a complete whole. This tree was in fact the tree of life extending throughout the universe. Its three roots reached into the lands of the giants and gods where serpents constantly gnawed at them. Under the root which extended into the country of the gods, the Norns dwelt, three maidens who protected the lives of men. Mankind was free to act but the consequences were predetermined by these Fates. The branches of Yggdrasil spread through the heavens and its leaves were events that have happened and will happen. The entire tree is constantly tortured by inimical forces but it remains firm and continues to flourish throughout the ages. In this myth the Norseman's whole experience of life, past, present, and future is presented. It is one of the most comprehensive conceptions found in any mythology.

Their idea of immortality is a typical product of the Norse mind. They regarded it as a continuation of earthly existence. Indeed, the Norse placed a coin under the dead man's tongue to defray his expenses to his final abode. There were two regions: Hal, and Valhalla where Odin received the warriors who had lived and died courageously.

At the hall of Valhalla the warriors lived much the same life as they would in a chieftain's hall. The days were spent in fighting one another to gain more skill so they could better defend the gods in Rognarak and at night they enjoyed the meat and drink of Odin. It was served to them by the Valkeries, women who gathered the slain from the battlefield and brought them to Odin. Eating and drinking played such a great part in the life of the Norseman that he couldn't conceive of death without it. The desire to die in battle in order to gain Valhalla and Odin's approval made the Norse incomparable fighters but it also colored their philosophy with melancholy and heightened their disregard for life.

This was indeed a religion in which cowards, hypocrites and weaklings could never find comfort.

Seeing about him in life the constant struggle of the elements, the Norseman conceived the idea of the eternal warring between good and evil powers and the perishableness of all things. This struggle and the idea of the frailty of life was first introduced in the creation by the battle of the gods and giants, and by the fact that the creation of the gods followed that of Ymir. Their destruction was then foreshadowed, as that which is born must die. The gradual growth of this germ of death was sketched throughout the entire mythology, the forces of good and evil gathering strength for the final combat.

The Elder Edda described Ragnorak, or the twilight of the gods, as preceded by ages of depravity and sin in the world, now constantly covered with snow. Then miraculous things happened, the sun and the moon were devoured, the stars hurled from the heavens, the Feuris Wolf, monster of evil, broke loose, and the sea covered the land. On these waters floated the ship Nalfar which was constructed of dead men's nails. The Norse believed that for this reason great care should be taken to die without long nails, for he who died with uncut nails would furnish material for this ship and thus hasten the coming of Ragnorak. The Feuris Wolf then advanced and opened his mouth, encircling the universe. The midgard serpent, which surrounded the abode of man, emitted venom, and from this devastation the sons of Muspell rode forth joined by the giants. These forces lined up against the gods, who were arrayed for battle, and engaged them in combat. Luck varied, first the gods and then the giants were victorious but it was obvious that total destruction was the only possible result. Thus in Ragnorak the great antagonisms pervading the world were removed in a final struggle.

In contrast to these profound and sombre conceptions engendered by a stalwart people in a gloomy country, stand the happier and freer conceptions of the Greek reflecting a joyousness of life as it is experienced by a released people in a friendlier natural background. The geography of Greece shows a panorama of beauty and intense color. Snowy peaks glistening white in the sunlight against the deep blue of the sky, their crests fringed with forests and their slopes covered with vineyards and flowers. Beneath them lies an aquamarine sea dotted with islands. The loveliness of the country is enhanced by a luminous atmosphere, mists and storms almost never dimming the brilliance of the sun. This same clarity which characterizes their climate seems also to have permeated their thought. The Greeks loved this nature that was so beautiful and friendly to them. Most of their lives were spent out-of-doors in close intimacy with it, and the very experience of living in these surroundings was so intensely pleasurable that the Greek was never preoccupied with thoughts of what must come after. The uncertainty of life and the imminence of death were accepted as inevitable but never gloomily brooded over. A life free from struggle with nature gave the Greek a happy outlook. There was nothing in his existence that filled him with wondering awe and fear of the power behind the mighty forces of the universe. Indeed, the friendliness of the climate begot temperance and balance in their thinking and denied the morbid pre-occupation of people whose spirits are coaxed into mysticism by the awe-inspiring qualities of their surroundings. All this accounted for versatility as a virtue to the Greeks as against a more highly specialized mystical comprehension. Thus the Greek who contributed to the well-being of his fellow men was revered more highly than the magician or priest and the formation of a religion received less approbation than the solution for some of the problems of life.

The Greek mythology lacks the profundity of the Norse and achieves worth mainly through its graceful beauty and light fancy. The embellishments of the conception rather than the conception itself merit attention. In beauty of detail and external adornment the myths excel. Greece like Norway is geographically divided up into small states. However, in Greece the small unities were never fused, as the people found life sufficiently comprehensive within their own particular group. The same idea of the whole as made up of small entities, carries over into their mythology which is arranged in groups of myths. There is no sustaining force which binds them together, as the tree Yggdrasil does in the Norse. Each group has its own centre around which it revolves and develops perfection singly without regard for the whole

Again love of elaboration in the Greek system is seen in the number of punishments they originated. Almost every soul in Hell had its particular punishment. Characteristic indeed, is the Greek idea of life after death. The guiltless ones and the chosen heroes went to the Elysian fields where they followed the pursuit of their former life in a land of eternal spring, sunlight, happiness and song. From Hesiod one gains the impression that these regions were the epitome of bliss with their profusion of flowers and fruit trees, and sweet singing birds. Everyone is familiar with the Greek Hades, the dark kingdom ruled over by Pluto and Persephone, his wife. There is no intimation of an end, a last judgment or Ragnarok in their idea of the after life. The Greeks allowed their gods to exist as long as man still remembered them, and after they grew tired of them they passed into oblivion. The struggle of good and evil which began with the Titans and gods was not sustained throughout the whole system. There was not the realization of the powers of evil, which forced them to carry through the struggle against them to the last reckoning of the universe. The element of eternal combat did not enter into the life of the Greek as it did in that of the Norseman, and as he was primarily interested in life and not the fate of the gods, he neglected to add a fifth act to the drama of his mythology.

There was a great difference between the attitude of these two peoples toward their gods. To the Norse they were the embodiment of all the traits they considered virtues and they endowed them with courage, fortitude, intelligence and generosity. These ideal gods ruled the world and to them the Norse must offer sacrifices to gain their help. However, because of his belief in his individual worth the Norseman regarded the gods as his associates whom he could aid and who would give him aid. Even these deities, possessing the perfect attributes, were liable to death in the final Ragnorak.

The Greek gods were not the personification of an ideal, but persons raised above mankind by the gift of immortality. They possessed all of the human traits, anger, jealousy, and hatred as well as generosity, strength and courage.

Paul Shorey says, "Homeric divinities are immoral mythological figures, magnified men, Mycenaean lords at their ease, reclined and unhampered by moral limitations, but it is idle to deny that they are also sometimes thought of as guardians of the moral law." The Greeks, too, placated these deities because they ruled the world and could give them what they wanted. While the Greek gods did not furnish an ideal to follow, they did supply inspiration for the aesthetic sense of the Greek.

The supreme god of the Norsemen was Odin who ruled over the physical and intellectual worlds. He permeated all matter and controlled gods and men, seeking to elevate and ennoble them. He is pictured as a tall one-eyed man with a staff in one hand, two ravens on his shoulders and two wolves at his feet. He roamed throughout all the universe and sometimes displayed his countenance to men.

Jupiter was the all powerful ruler of the Greek universe. This omnipotent sovereign communicated with man and the number of his mortal love affairs was sufficient to tarnish somewhat the brilliance of his immortality. Jupiter rode through the heavens in a chariot hurling thunderbolts about him.

The immortal wielder of thunderbolts in Norse mythology was Thor, conceived as a large man, fiery tempered in combat, but jovial in peace. He swung his hammer Moljner many times in protection of both gods and man. This god, although in many ways more like the Greek Ares, a lesser god, than Jupiter or Odin, won the affections of the people simply because his traits were so congenial to them.

The Greek god Ares, was hated by his people for cruelty and treachery, as the more cultivated Greeks had contemplated enough to withhold their admiration for such qualities.

In contrast to these harsh deities was Balder, favorite of all nature, the white god of the Norse, dazzling in his purity. The death of Balder, brought about by the god of evil, caused deep sorrow to the entire universe, which still weeps for his loss. Balder represented summer to the Norsemen, that short summer that they so loved and whose going they regarded as a tragedy. For the Greek, Apollo conquered darkness and gave spring sunshine to man. His importance in the Greek system was relatively small when compared to Balder's influence upon the Norse people. This is partly attributed to the effects of the two climates on the respective folk groups.

A deity that Norse mythology revolved about was Loke, the evil principle in omnipresent form. As Odin sought to ennoble nature, so Loke sought to debase it. The forces of this God gathered power through all time to be destroyed finally in Ragnorak. There is no counterpart for him in Greek mythology.

In both of these systems there were stories of heroes, mortals, who because of great deeds and noble traits were exalted to deistic rank. In northern myths, Segurd was the most admired hero. This story spread into many countries, notably to Germany, where it furnished the basis for the Nibelungenlied. The same stress on physical courage and everlasting struggle permeated it in all its versions. The hero of Greece was Hercules of proverbial strength and courage.

Many similarities attach to the minor gods of both mythologies traceable to their kindred sources of conception.

Obvious similarities mark the lives of the gods Adonis, Attis, Balder and Christ. No doubt the ceremonies of these ancient gods colored the interpretation placed by early Christians on all the historic facts of Christ's life. Adonis, god of vegetation, was a youth born of a Virgin, so beautiful that both Venus and Persephone fell in love with him. To reconcile their claims it was agreed he should spend half the year, summer, in the upper world, and the winter half in the lower. In the autumn he was killed by a boar. In the spring a festival of his resurrection was held, the women performing rites around a washed and anointed corpse, from which the spirit of the god was supposed to have arisen.

The story of Attis was very similar. He was a fair young shepherd loved by Cybele, mother of the gods. He, too, was born of a Virgin who conceived by putting a pomegranate in her bosom. Attis died, killed by a boar, and bled to death at the foot of a pine tree. The sacrifice of his blood revived the fertility of the earth and in the celebration of his death and resurrection, his image was fastened to the trunk of a pine tree.

Balder, the Norse god of light, whose goodness and beauty succumbed before the elements of darkness and evil, was another example of the suffering Saviour. This god, however, did not rise again but remained in Hell because of the treachery of Loke.

Among the most widespread and general elements in the stories of most saviour-deities is their Virgin birth. There is hardly a god whose worship as a benefactor of man has attained popularity, who has not been portrayed as born of a Virgin. The idea of the mother has always touched the deepest springs of feeling and the first object of worship was the Earth, Mother of all things. As the Saviour legend sprang up, he was conceived of as born from nature, the pure Virgin of the world. So, this idea of Virgin birth has been sustained in the creation of Perseus by Danaë and a shower of gold sent by Zeus and that of Dionysus by the spirit of the almighty and Semele. The names of these Virgins seems to root in a common origin; Myrrha, mother of Adonis, Mara, mother of Hermes, and finally Mary, mother of Christ.

In the lives of all these deities is implicit the phenomenon of nature, illustrated by the changes of vegetation on the earth. The influence of seasonal change was apparent in many of the festivals too, Christmas being one of them. The birth of Jesus and Apollo, near the beginning of January and in some underground cave, is attributable to the fear of man over the failure of the sun's strength and the decay of their God of Light. Man, therefore, waits with anxiety for the lengthening days and the rebirth of the god or the sun after his long winter darkness. Because the days begin to lengthen at the first of the year, he places the celebration of the birth near that time. This advent of the god usually takes place at midnight in a subterranean chamber, thereby heightening the light and warmth of his glorious coming.

The death and resurrection of Christ convey the same idea of conquest over evil and darkness and show the inheritance of climatic effects as basic to the conceptions of Christianity. The crucifixion, however, took place in the spring rather than the fall. The method of Christ's death, by crucifixion, is primarily the Roman manner of torture and it also demonstrates the influence of pagan tree worship. In both the Greek and the Norse, trees were held sacred and supposed to be inhabited by beneficent spirits. As Christ hung upon a bare tree, a cross, so he was first associated with the spirit of the tree in the minds of the pagans who had been accustomed to revere the tree deities.

Besides the great number of mythological suggestions in the life of Christ himself there were many in the Christian sacraments. The celebrations of communion and baptism were taken directly from Greek festival rites. Part of the Dionysiac festival was the sacrifice of Dionysus himself and the purification of man by his blood. The idea of eating the flesh of a man or an animal in order to convey some of their qualities to the partaker, was a firmly accepted usage in many primitive religions. In early Christianity the form of Christ was made of bread for the communicants to eat but from the fear of mice and rats debasing it the custom was abandoned.

The use of baptism as a means of purifying the soul before entry into the Church found its forerunner in the initiation required of all persons who wished to participate in the Eleusian mysteries. The candidate had to free himself from certain elements that were present in human life, before he could be found worthy of admittance to the awful glory of the mysteries. The Eleusian rites held a powerful influence over the Greek world that so greatly affected early Christianity.

Norse ritual entered less fully into Christian ceremony. Remoteness, natural barriers, and reluctance to accept Christianity broke the thread of continuity. The attributes of courage and strength were so ingrained in these stalwart men that they looked upon the feminine qualities of Christianity as weak and cowardly. Indeed, the final acceptance of Christianity in Norway was due to the winning of a battle after the chief had prayed to Christ in the hope that perhaps this gentle foreign god might give him victory.

The conception of Christ conquering the serpent seems similar to that of Thor slaying the Midgard serpent, and certain Norse gods are made unforgettable through the gift of their names to the days of the week.

"Obviously Christianity borrowed much from the rivals over which it was going to reign supreme in the Occidental world. Its outward observance, its ritual, and the organization of its hierarchy are perhaps due to the associations it finally overcame. The form of the fasts and festivals and institutions like monachism cannot be explained without reference to those religions whose rivalry was so long suffered. The dogmas took many things from the same sources. If investigation should show that in this respect also Christianity owes something to its forerunners and rivals, the argument against its divine origin would not thereby be strengthened. That in the course of development Christianity developed characteristics which fettered it to its environment would be a strict conformity with the laws which appear to govern the evolution of all institutions, and if the power ruling the universe chooses to work by law rather than by what seems to be caprice, such a choice does not show Him to be lacking either in wisdom or benevolence." If we could study Christianity without prejudice as we can Norse and Greek mythology it might appear as a link in a chain of events which began centuries ago.

THE M. V. S. COUNCIL

Last February I received a letter from Miss Cole asking me to come back to dear old M. V. S. in Cherry-blossom Season to talk over with a group of alumnae and non-graduates the advisability of forming a Mount Vernon Seminary Council. The idea seemed to hold many possibilities, and the thought of getting more closely in touch with the School was appealing, aside from the fact that if Miss Cole asks any of her girls to do something we do it if we possibly can.

So Tuesday evening, April 14, found us assembled in the Great Hall, Mrs. Somers' beautiful portrait greeting us with something of her own gracious charm and Miss Cole and the Faculty bringing to each one the cordial welcome for which Mount Vernon Seminary is so justly famous.

There were representatives from all but the California Chapter and "delegates at large" as well as visiting alumnae from near Washington.

On Wednesday morning the delegates met quite early in the Great Hall, where Miss Ballou and Miss Hastings explained briefly the courses of study which are being offered the girls and the successful functioning of well thought-out plans for unifying the work of the various classes and subjects.

The delegates were given schedules of all the classes and each one visited those that particularly interested her. This proved to be a thrilling experience to some of us who have been out of school a long time. And the general impression was one of amazement at the practical development of the interest and imagination of the girls as the dry facts of history, literature, science or mathematics, apparently unrelated facts and theories, were woven together—one subject into another, back and forth, crossing and re-crossing the threads until the vision of a real pattern began to form before the students, making all their studying worth doing because it really touched each girl's life in some of its various phases. Every one of us delegates caught a glimpse of the splendid vision of the work and study and original research that Miss Cole and her Faculty have put into these courses of study to make them vital to the Girl of today.

We were further stimulated by the strong, concise statement of the present economic situation which Mr. David Lawrence gave at the Assembly, bringing us up-to-date on one of today's most vital problems.

The afternoon was most delightfully spent seeing the beautiful grounds which nature had bedecked for the occasion with her tenderest greens and gayest blossoms. We wandered down to the Field House, where Miss Trippett told us about that Activity, and the girls served a charming tea. We also saw the Exhibition of Projects which is M. V. S.'s partial solution of the difficult problem of examinations.

It was a glorious sight that evening to find all the girls assembled in the Great Hall in their dainty gowns singing with such fervor and interest the School and Class songs and finally their songs of devotion to Mrs. Somers, Mrs. Hensley, and Miss Cole. It was here that we felt again the Spirit of M. V. S. which binds together all the varied activities into a splendid whole for the development of womanhood.

The evening Program, with its Latin Play, fine Glee Club songs, piano solos, and French and English songs, was a fitting climax to a day crowded full of impressions and pleasures.

All this for the education of the delegates and to give us some idea of the work being done at M. V. S. and a slight suggestion of the many questions and problems that are continually presenting themselves in such an active and up-to-date School.

So it was a rather humble but vitally interested group that gathered for the first real meeting of the Council on Thursday morning. As an inspiration for the work ahead of us, the various Activities were presented by different Students in simple, concise, and delightfully unaffected short talks. Miss Walker, Miss De Lano, and Mr. Lloyd told us of the Orientation courses and of their successful operation, as we had seen them for ourselves in the classes.

A constitution and by-laws for the guidance of the Council were adopted, and Miss Cole then presented some of the problems that she wanted discussed. There seemed to be some feeling that there should be more privileges and more freedom for the members of the Collegiate Division, especially for the Seniors. The girls feel that they should be more nearly on a par with other Women's Colleges. It was suggested that the best way to find out exactly what the girls wanted would be to let them tell us themselves. So a group of representative girls from the Collegiate Division was called from their classes and presented their desires in a charmingly frank and friendly spirit. Their ideas were well thought out and well expressed. They gave no sign of undue embarrassment, although none of them was expecting to be asked to meet the delegates. Later, a similar group of Secondary School girls gave suggestions of some restrictions they would like removed. As a whole both groups agreed entirely with the ideals and spirit of the School, and only minor changes in rules and privileges were desired, a little less chaperonage in town, more frequent movie privileges and calling permissions, and some school dances, etc.

The strong impression these girls made on the delegates was of their fine spirit of cooperation with the Powers that Be and a sturdy keeping up of M. V. S. standards. There was much informal discussion by the Council with a general feeling expressed that the girls' wishes should be met just as far as was consistent with the high ideals for which M. V. S. stands. And the First Council adjourned to watch the Athletics and later to be delightfully entertained at tea in the Senior Parlor.

I hardly know how to sum up the impressions we members of the Council took away with us. Very deep among them is the admiration of the splendid Faculty so adequately and joyously headed by Miss Cole and the value it is to this group of happy, capable girls to live their school life in such glorious surroundings under such auspices. We are glad we belong to such an organization.

Mount Vernon Seminary still "stands for a certain measure of self-knowledge, self-reverence, self-control, for a widening of human and intellectual sympathies and for an ever-deepening sense of the beauty of fidelity to right and to duty" as Mrs. Somers has so graciously said.

If in any small way the Council can help to carry forward its ideals, we are only too glad of the opportunity for service.

ALUMNAE REUNION

The fifty-sixth Annual Reunion of the Mount Vernon Seminary Alumnae Association was held in the Great Hall of the school on Saturday, the twenty-third day of May, Miss Foerderer, the President, in the Chair.

The meeting called to order, Miss Myers introduced the Class of 1931. The President's greeting follows:

"Members of the Class of 1931:

"As President of the Alumnae Association, one of the happiest duties which falls to my lot is to welcome you. I do so with real pleasure, anticipating on your part active cooperation so that we may steadily prove of greater usefulness to our school.

"You came to M. V. S. to learn and now we assume that you go forth to serve . . . . Let your manner of acceptance of the responsibilities that come to you reflect credit on M. V. S. where you have found the stimulus of all that is noblest. Occasions without number will present themselves for constructive service on your part. Be ready to render that service which the world has a right to ask of each one, by assisting in the promotion of those things which your intercourse here has taught you are paramount.

"We of the Alumnae Association welcome you into our fellowship and ask that your joining with us be not only in augmentation of our number, but that it prove a true partnership wherein we shall all sincerely serve the best interests and increase the prestige of our Alma Mater."

Miss Ainslee Puhl, President of the Class of 1931, responded:

"Madam President:

"In behalf of the Senior Class I wish to thank the Alumnae Association for the gracious welcome which you have extended to us:

"We are conscious of the honor conferred upon us in becoming members of this Association, and we fully realize the privilege and responsibility which is about to be ours.

"The Class of 1931 is particularly inspired by Miss Walker and the Class of '81. We shall try to follow their example in the hope that we, too, may contribute as much to the life of M. V. S. as they have by their constant loyalty and service.

"May we assure you of our sincerest desire to participate in your many activities throughout the country and to cooperate in every possible way in years to come."

Miss Foerderer then voiced the joy of the Alumnae in having Miss Cole present this year, saying, "the cloud which rested on the Reunion last year, because of Miss Cole's absence, has been lifted today." Miss Cole expressed her thanks for the many messages sent her during her "exile in Italy" and her happiness at being back.

Miss Cole then called the Roll. Four of the Honorary Members replied to their names, Miss Brouse, Miss Guard, Miss Hill and Miss Cole; and ninety Alumnae were present, others arriving later for the luncheon.

Telegrams and messages of congratulations to the classes celebrating their Fiftieth, Twenty-fifth and Tenth Reunions were read, as well as greetings to Miss Cole.

The minutes of the last meeting were approved without correction. The Report of the Corresponding Secretary was heard and accepted.

Upon the reading of the Treasurer's Report, it was moved, seconded and carried that the report be filed for audit.

Miss Walker then read for Miss Ames, Chairman of the Chapel Committee, the Committee report (printed elsewhere in the Annual). Miss Foerderer voiced the general acceptance of this report with a graceful tribute to Miss Ames.

Miss Cole then spoke of the need of inside blinds in the Chapel. Mildred Williamson suggested that the Adelia Gates Hensley Chapter of the M. V. S. Society would be willing to help by sending word to the other Chapters of the pressing need of inside blinds. In the discussion that followed, Miss Ames rose to say that the suggestion should come from the Chapel Committee, but Miss Walker graciously "begged to differ with her honored colleague," and moved that the Adelia Gates Hensley Chapter be empowered to act in the matter. Seconded and carried. Miss Walker announced the appropriation by the M. V. S. Society of $65.00 toward the Fund for the Chapel blinds. The motion was entertained, seconded and so voted, that the Alumnae Association give $65.00 also, for the purpose.

The question of establishing a Life Membership in the Alumnae Association was brought up by the President. This topic had been discussed at the previous business meeting in April. In the discussion that followed, it was indicated that such a class of membership would not only prove a convenience for persons who wished to take advantage of it, and be a sound financial measure as well, but that it exists in all other organizations of this type. The fee for a Life Membership was carefully considered. The motion was made by Marianne Stevenson that a Life Membership be established with dues at $100.00. It was duly seconded by Miss Brinkman and carried with but slight opposition. This action involves an Amendment to the Constitution, which action shall be taken at a later meeting in accordance with the By-Laws.

Under new business, the President of the Class of 1921, fittingly presented Miss Cole with a gift of $2,293.44 upon the occasion of their Tenth Reunion. The money is to be used for some need of the school, the building of a nine hole golf course seeming to be the most desired by the student body. This gift comes as the result of two Insurance policies which were taken out in the names of Jane Campbell and Mary Cunningham in 1921. Each girl in the Class paid ten dollars annually toward the premiums, which, plus the interest, constitutes the amount of the gift.

In accepting the gift Miss Cole paid a glowing tribute to the class as being outstandingly loyal in the activities and stressed the tie which has bound them together during the past ten years. A tablet is to be placed in the Cloister Hall to commemorate the gift.

With a word from the President in closing, there being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

THE ALUMNAE LUNCHEON

The business concluded, the company broke up into groups for greeting and reminiscence—and when the signal was given, marched into the dining room under arches of green and white held by the undergraduates who meanwhile sang the Alma Mater Glorious.

The special guests of honor were the members of the Class of 1881—who were celebrating their golden jubilee. Five of the seven still living were present, this large percentage bringing the privilege of having for the third time, their numerals inscribed on the Attendance Cup. The day had unusual significance because of its association with Miss Walker. There were many gifts showing appreciation of her long and loyal service to the School.

The place cards for the luncheon, Helen Myers' idea, were most appropriate and unusual, folders inscribed "1881-1931" and enclosing a picture of Miss Walker. The Class of 1931 sang their Class Song, greeted with enthusiastic applause. Martha Davenport then read her Alma Mater Poem:

As travelers bound on distant journeys
Do oft look back to see from whence they came,
So we, in passing from protecting doors,
Pause and repeat the well-beloved name
Of this our school, whose columned cloisters lie
Quiet beneath the moon, while shadows cast
A softening light on all our memories
Etching in silvered tones these years now past.

Quickly they sped while we were living here
Heedless were we of blessings you bestowed ;—
Relentless time moved swiftly in its flight,
Till now we find ourselves upon the road
That toward a hazy future points the way
But an enduring strength our souls have caught
And we begin our journey through this life
Sustained by shining Truths that you have taught.

Miss Hill precluded the Faculty's presentation of a handsome mahogany table with revolving base for books—by reading the following rhyme, announcing in answer to a question, Miss De Lano as co-author.

What bard is worthy of the task
Of singing Hattie Belle's praises, I ask—
For fifty years at the helm she has stood Piloting youth in ways that are good.
Now this should be one long paeon of praise
But she's such a rascal—what a cry friends would raise
If we dwelt on her virtues, omitting all vice
Which is, after all what makes her so nice.
A pity 'twould be if she had more control
Of that clever tongue which expresses the soul—
Of a penetrant wag and a scintillant wit.
If either she lacked we'd not like it a bit.
At Faculty meeting where questions so grave
Weigh us down to the depths, it is she who can save
The whole situation by a word or a phrase
Which leaves us all laughingly singing her praise.
The educational bridge over which she has passed
Is strong, well-built and ever will last—
But the recreational bridge across a small table
She also enjoys because she's so able.
She enters the game in purposeful fun
As to the prizes—she takes every one!
Hattie Belle's our ideal of justice and right
What more could a friend or a rhymester indite
To measure the love that on her we bestow?
So let us all rise our affection to show.

Miss Guard added to the ripple of laughter that followed by saying that although she had seen Miss Walker as "mad as a hornet," she had never known her to leave a sting.

And from a little group of which Miss Edwards seemed the center came the following, accompanying a purse holding 50 new pennies bearing dates from 1881 to 1931.

O brilliant Class of eighty-one
Thro fifty years your way you've won!
Your senses five remain still bright
But just in case they fail you,
These fifty cent-ses more we send
New honors to avail you!

Miss Cole then took the floor and in happy vein gave her own memories of the Class of 1906, which this year celebrates its silver jubilee. Dorothy Willing responded for its six representatives, saying in part . . . There was not time to gather news items about my classmates. However, I can at least show you what the twenty-five years have done to some of us—Will the members of the Class of 1906 please rise for inspection?

Miss Cole then addressed the Class of 1921, recalling somewhat to their amazement many interesting events in connection with their Senior Year.

Eleanor Bovenizer of the Class of 1930 spoke of their having "stolen a march" on Miss Cole; and since she had been absent at Commencement Time last year, they would like "to come back and graduate again."

By this time, the gathering was somewhat prepared for final great moments. They came thick and fast. Miss Cole gave a resumé of what the Class of '81 had meant to M. V. S. Miss Foerderer presented Miss Ames with a beautiful Paul Revere silver bowl appropriately inscribed in token of her invaluable services as school librarian and Chairman of the Chapel Committee. Then came the climax: the presentation by the Alumnae President to Miss Walker of a check from her M. V. S. girls to be used for European travel during the coming summer. The Chapter bearing her name added $200.00 for her to spend while abroad.

Knowing Miss Walker, we can appreciate the deep feeling behind her response—"There are no words in any language to match the beautiful thing you have done for me today." This memorable Reunion was brought most fittingly to a close by Miss Walker herself in "A Tribute and a Toast"—prepared when she had no slightest idea of what Alumnae Reunion Day was to reveal to her.

A year ago, the Class of 1881 contemplated furnishing the program for their fiftieth reunion. Later, they reconsidered. One day, in the presence of Miss Morgan and Miss Ames and Mrs. Strauss, I suggested that for my part on that occasion I would read some stirring poem of my youth, Marco Bozarris, or the Battle of Waterloo, and turning to Irene, I said, "Would you enjoy that?" "Yes," she said, dubiously, "if it were not too long." I at once gave up the idea and on consultation with my friends, the whole plan was abandoned.

Later, I said to my sister, "What would you say to the Alumnae Association if you had been fifty years graduated?" "Well," she answered, "I would speak briefly of this, touch on that, give a short account." "No," said I to myself, "after fifty years, I will not be limited. 'Time was made for slaves'."

Last night, ere I slept, I thought of the word I wished to speak. Let us call it "A Tribute and a Toast."

A Tribute of Reverence to Mrs. Somers—seer of visions, maker of dreams-come-true, teacher incomparable, lover of beauty, of wit, of life!

A Tribute of Reverence to Mrs. Hensley—sword of justice miracle of selflessness, incarnation of high courage!

For the Toast neither water nor wine, but a rarer oblation, an elixir drawn from the heart.

A Toast to Jean Dean Cole, friend, comrade, fellow-worker, who shares with me her joys and triumphs (and they are many) and honors me with glimpses of her problems and her responsibilities (they are not few) !

A Toast to the Faculties of fifty-six years ; to those whose memory is enshrined within my heart, to those who still, today, work and pray and hope with me !

A Toast to the Class of '81 with whom I have kept step all these years.

"Then come the rough weather
Come weal or come woe,
We'll stand by each other,
Wherever we go."

A Toast to all the other girls since 1875—companions of many happy hours ; to those whose messages of love have made this year beautiful to me ; and a toast to this fledgling class so soon to try its wings in a new element !

A Toast to my loved ones whose presence here crowns my happiness today !

For every living one of those I toast, I ask of the Future three boons—a past as rich in memories, a present as full of joy and to the very end, serenity and faith in God.

THE ELIZABETH SOMERS CHAPEL

Report of 1931

Like some sheltered inlet, secure from the tempestuous breakers of the open sea, is the peaceful chronicle of the present day Chapel Reports, in comparison with the stormy financial stress of our early years. Only one thing remains unfinished, inside shutters. I grant you they are desperate necessities, but thanks to the reviving hope engendered by the M. V. S. Council in April there seems to be a way out. There are eight Chapters and eight shutterless windows, and it was suggested that if each Chapter should send just sixty-five dollars, the aggregate, added to the sum in hand, would be sufficient. Would it be too rude to look into the mouth of this valued, albeit only potential, gift and say: "What thou doest, do speedily." But if you could see the dazzling sun, full in the eyes of a speaker, you would be convinced, without the shadow of a doubt, that inside shutters are painfully needed.

Perhaps the most conspicuous event of this year, is the granting of the use of our Chapel for the services, each Sunday of the Methodist Metropolitan Church, while that congregation is erecting its own imposing edifice in the neighborhood of Mount Vernon Seminary. Years ago, Mrs. Somers was an active member of that beautiful and historic Metropolitan, and when a year since, it was appropriated by the Government, in order to replace the site by one of the magnificent national buildings that will form a part of the splendid Capital's architecture, Metropolitan found itself without a place of worship during the erection of its new church building. Being so near us, our Chapel was suggested, and we were only too happy to be of service. Nothing would have given Mrs. Somers more pleasure than this friendly fellowship and it seems peculiarly fitting that the active work of a great church could thus impart its benediction to our more or less isolated Chapel. Already we have witnessed a wedding and a baptism, and during the tenure of the Metropolitan sojourn, our girls have been in attendance for the Sunday morning services.

Two gifts and one Memorial have been added this year. The consistent plan of the Chapel Committee, from the beginning, has been, not speed but the most beautiful and fitting gifts and Memorials we could secure, being willing to wait any time, if necessary, to attain an ultimate best.

For some years, therefore, we have had in the Savings Department the wherewithal for these gifts and the Memorial, but not until this year have we found exactly what we most desired. When Miss Cole returned from abroad, she brought a lovely sixteenth century embroidery suitable and ample for both altar cloth and the "fall" of the lectern in the chancel. The longer embroidery covers the great table and serves as an altar cloth, being the gift of Mrs. Emeline Spry Keyes, while the embroidery of the reading desk is the gift of Mrs. Edith Meacham Hitchcock, both of the donors being graduates of the Class of 1906.

The beautiful Memorial, which we dedicate today, is the Luca Della Robbia Lunette given in memory of one of our most devoted graduates, Caroline W. Janney of the Class of 1896. The desire for some adequate memorial for so faithful an Alumna, so intimately woven into the very life of the school, was not fully satisfied until we found it was possible to secure the lovely Luca Della Robbia, one of the choicest pieces of art in the Chapel. It was made in Italy from measurements given by Miss Cole and under the supervision of Elsie Foerderer. Keenly appreciative always of beauty, nothing seems to be more fitting than this colorful lunette at the very entrance of the Chapel in loving memory of so loyal a friend.

Thus gift by gift, the Chapel becomes the shrine of unforgettable memories and in very truth seems our Westminster Abbey. From every part comes the remembrance of those high souls who still influence us and whom we keep in our hearts through its hallowed association.

ANNE SEYMOUR AMES,
Chairman of the Chapel Committee

GRACE WILLIS,
Treasurer

Dear Alumnæ :

About six weeks ago I sent you and the members of The M. V. S. Society a letter stating that Miss Walker would celebrate her Fiftieth Reunion this month and asking if you did not agree that we, her old girls, should mark that occasion in some way worthy of her and of our appreciation of her. I suggested that our gift be a trip to Europe.

It is a very real pleasure to tell you that you have now made this plan an accomplished fact. Last Saturday, at The Alumnæ Reunion, I had the honor of presenting a golden envelope to our beloved Miss Walker in your name and that of The M. V. S. Society. It contained a check for $2,660, so you may think of a radiantly happy person wandering here and there along the highways and byways of Europe as your guest this summer.

A formal acknowledgment has gone out to each contributor but I also wish, in this way, to thank those of you who responded so spontaneously to this idea and made it possible.

When I say we are grateful to Miss Walker for giving us the privilege of indicating in some measure our love for her and our appreciation of her, I am sure I express the thought of each one of her girls. Her gifts to us, in the class room and out of it, have been unending in their constructive influence and as we bid her Bon Voyage it is with hearts full of deepest gratitude.

Faithfully yours,

ELSIE FOERDERER.

RETROSPECT

My dear girls:

My Jubilee Year began on Founder's Day when I had the honor of blowing out the tallest candle on the birthday cake and making a wish for M. V. S.

A gala time followed on November the tenth when I met with the Adelia Gates Hensley Chapter as their guest of honor. Beside a personal gift concealed in a corsage, there was a check for the purchase of Library books and a reproduction of the new bookplate inscribed in memory of my thirty-five years of teaching at M. V. S.

The Surprise Roll Call with its beautiful dedication came in time to wish me a Merry Christmas. Thereafter, letters arrived from all directions, bearing congratulations, best wishes and messages of love. So it is not strange that I said to Miss Cole on Friday, May the twenty-second, "You see before you, a supremely happy person," nor that I brought with me to the Reunion Luncheon a Tribute and a Toast.

Stunning events followed thick and fast: leading the Class of '81 with my beloved Elsie Foerderer, listening in a daze to the song in my honor—dimly aware that my cherry blossom snap-shot marked each place and that the entire Faculty had been invited to share my joy—conscious of every word that fell from the lips of each speaker—rejoicing that the Class of '81 had again won the Cup, loving my Faculty table, appreciating Miss Cole's tributes to my Classmates and to me! What a Kaleidoscope! Every turn a more colorful and unforgettable vision!

Is it a wonder that the climax found me breathless—that a fitting expression of my deep feeling was impossible and that only by a supreme effort of will, was I able to pay my Tribute and give my Toast, hoping that in it you could find thanks not only for all the lovely events of the year—but also for that generous outpouring which means a Wonder Trip to Europe and a substantial addition to my Retirement Fund.

My heart goes out in love and gratitude to each one of you, at the close of this, my Golden Jubilee Year.

Faithfully yours,

HARRIET BELLE WALKER

LIFE MEMBERSHIP

At the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association, the motion was made, duly seconded, and carried, that a new class of membership, to be known as Life Membership, be established.

The dues of this class are to be one hundred dollars ($100.00). Any active member of the Association may become a Life Member upon payment of this fee.

At the present time the Constitution reads as follows:

ARTICLE II

Section I. Every graduate of the Institution shall be considered an active and life member of the Association.

Of course this means that once a member of the Association, one always remains such. In the future, while active members shall be considered members of the Association for life, the new class, Life Membership, is created for those who wish to make but one payment of dues and as an advantageous financial measure for the organization.

As this type of membership exists in other similar organizations, it seems a logical measure for us to adopt.

It is to be distinctly understood that no member should consider herself under any obligation to become a Life Member.

Two Alumnae have already become Life Members. It is hoped that others will soon signify their intention of doing likewise.

The above plan will be put in the form of an Amendment to the Constitution in 1932.

IN MEMORIAM

Susie Plain Martin, Died December 29, 1930

Susie Plain Martin attended Mount Vernon Seminary as a day pupil and is remembered by her Classmates of 1891 as a quiet, charming girl who applied herself to her work with a spirit of diligence and earnestness. She was a member of the Societies of the day and was at all times a dependable friend.

Years have passed and many of us have never met since the days of Graduation and farewells, but we of the Class of '91 will never forget our good friend, Susie Plain Martin and the happy years spent with her at our beloved Mount Vernon Seminary.

The Class of 1891 extends its sincere sympathy to her daughter.

CLARA SEIPP BARTHOLOMAY, Secretary.

May Mellish Harris, Died January 18, 1931

It is with deep regret that the Class of 1894 records the death of one of its members, May Mellish Harris, of Champaign, Illinois. Though the years since graduation have brought her back to M. V. S. but seldom and few of her Classmates have been able to keep in close touch with her, they will always remember her as a very vital person and one of the most interesting and delightful of their group.

The keenest sympathy goes to her sons.

GRACE WRIGHT CAPEN, Secretary.

Adalyn Smith Holden, Died February, 1931

As one of the few remaining members of the Class of 1879, I learned with a great deal of sadness of the death of Adalyn Smith Holden. She was a true M. V. S. daughter, a tower of strength in her church work—a poetess, a musician, as well as a loving wife and mother.

To her husband and children I offer heartfelt sympathy.

ANNA BAGGS KOEHNE.

MEMORIAL TO CAROLINE WINSLOW JANNEY
Class of 1896

At the Alumnae Reunion the Association paused when the Class of 1896 was reached in the calling of the Roll and paid tribute to a loved member. The inscription on the Luca Della Robbia lunette in the Chapel was read by Miss Walker—and the prayer of Robert Louis Stevenson repeated, the members of the Association standing.

In remembrance of her long and untiring service as Alumna and Member of the Faculty of Mount Vernon Seminary, and in behalf of those closest to her in kinship and friendship

was given

In loving memory of

Caroline Winslow Janney

Died, June 8, 1922

Class of 1896

Member of the Faculty of Mount Vernon Seminary

Member of the Chapel Committee

Life ever granted the "Vision Splendid"

"Oh Lord, we thank Thee for our Friends and for those who have finished their course with gallant strength and courage. When the day comes, give us grace with them to persevere, and down to the gates of death, be loyal and loving. Help us to play the man, and grant us at the end the gift of sleep."

MISS BARBER

The poignancy of feeling of these past days has etched upon the plate of our consciousness a clear portrait of one long familiar, but in the suddenness of her taking away, illuminatingly vivid. It is as though the withdrawal of her physical presence had given birth in us to a full awareness of her spiritual reality. Now that these halls know her no more, she is everywhere; now that her voice is hushed, we hear her message as never before; now that her feet are still, her ministry sustains. In our hearts and in our lives Miss Barber already knows immortality.

One might dwell at length upon the flashing swiftness of her thought, the efficiency with which she handled the manifold tasks that fell to her lot, the accuracy of her work, the amazing quickness with which she dispatched whatever she undertook and yet not tell half the story. But it was not chiefly for her business acumen and efficiency that we valued her. Rather we cherish the memory of her genius for friendship and her rare quality of loyalty. She possessed a sympathetic imagination that quickly divined another's need and an unselfish spirit that gave unsparingly of herself to meet that need. Her fingers were never idle—now knitting for the Red Cross, now some delicate handiwork as a gift for a friend, now a cleverly illustrated epistle to lighten the tedious hours of an invalid's life. Who has not known her thoughtfulness—who has not shared her lavishly spent strength? Of that perhaps the finest of human attributes, loyalty, she possessed the highest type and a limitless store. Whether it was her family, her college, her town, her school, her work, her friends, she gave a fidelity unfailing and unstinted. Her loyalty found expression in word and in service, in season and out of season. Happy, one with such a friend!

We accept the challenge her brief life presents and, though with hearts heavy with the pain of her loss, we turn to the school she loved so deeply and served so well, to the life she lived so abundantly, and reverently in her memory consecrate our best anew to their service.

JEAN DEAN COLE.

1930-1931 at M. V. S.

And still another year has come and gone. It seems but a day that we were reading of the Class of 1930, and of their Commencement, which account occupied this space. Bromidic phrase, but it is true that "time flies."

The year 1930-1931 has been a memorable one in many ways; different from other years, but in different ways. There have been so many novel and all-absorbing activities to occupy and harass the already busy, busy M. V. S. student. The outdoor gymnasium and the Field House are beginning to lose that look of "newness" and are assuming the mellow tone that surrounds all the other beautiful buildings of Mount Vernon, the tone that lends a dignity and charm and which is only taken on with the tradition that years confer. Both these newest buildings have seen two senior classes come and go, and have had a world of spontaneous effort and energy poured into them.

When we look back upon this year, the first to spring into recollection will be the nights spent at the Shelter, where, lined up on army cots, dormitory fashion, out in the crisp night air on the Shelter porch, we enjoyed a veritable "camping out," with crickets chirping, and the fire crackling on the hearth inside. Those were great times, and the breakfasts cooked at "the oven" were such as were much more enjoyed after appetites had been whetted by the open air.

The Gymkhana, better known by the more ordinary name of Horse Show, was held on the hockey field early in May. It was quite a novel sight to see the horses galloping about on the grounds and one which we hope we will see many times again, for the enthusiasm for one of the best of sports, has grown in M. V. S. tremendously. The races, such as egg and spoon, potato, and the gaited classes were most interesting, and real Blue, Red and White ribbons were awarded to the winners and those who placed.

Another new feature was the Play Day held on our grounds this spring. The Friends School, Miss Madeira's, Holton-Arms, and Mount Vernon spent a day in athletic games, not in competition, but on teams with girls from all of the other schools. All of the contestants and visitors gathered at the Shelter for luncheon, and school songs were sung, after which the visiting schools apparently had a glorious time in the woods and about our lovely grounds.

Many new school songs have been written this year. Every Sunday evening, the girls gather on Senior steps and a regular "pep meeting" of enthusiastic singing is held. There are many excellent songs and this new custom is one which fills a very definite place in school life, engendering a spontaneous spirit that is otherwise lacking.

And so we are again in the midst of Commencement Week. School Day, the culmination of a year of earnest effort: Class Day and the Senior Will, the Abdication of Chapel seats, and the Bonfire. The Glee Club Concert, the Graduation procession, the last time in our beloved Chapel—the green busses, farewell—until another year.

M. L. S.

FACULTY PERSONALS

Miss Cole and Miss Brouse will sail for Europe in July. They will spend much of their time at Carlsbad, returning to America in September.

Miss Walker, Miss Guard and Mrs. Payne are happily planning a trip abroad, and will sail from New York on July nineteenth—their objectives are Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Germany. They, too, will be back in September.

Miss Ballou, who is the proud possessor of a Chevrolet, is driving to her home in New England. Later she will attend a six week's session at the University of Chicago, of Junior College Executives who meet to discuss the Junior College in all its phases.

Miss Hill will divide her time—a part in her Ohio home, a part in Atlantic City and later motor with her family, the destination as yet undecided.

Madame Peltier left for her beloved France before the close of school but we are delighted to announce that after a summer of rest, she will again be at her desk.

Miss Hastings will spend the greater part of her vacation in California and on the return trip will visit Brice and Zion National Parks.

Miss Blakeslee will remain at M. V. S. until July first.

Mrs. McAllister will visit her niece in Huntingdon Valley, Pa.

Mrs. Forman may be found in the vicinity of Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks.

Miss Elting goes to her home in Utica, New York, and later to Cape Cod.

Miss Martin is again in Clifton, New Brunswick, where she has a summer home. She will have as neighbors, the Rickett family, Mrs. Rickett having taken a cottage near for the summer.

Miss Edwards will spend the vacation in New York studying costuming.

Miss DeLano will be in Washington the earlier part of the holiday and afterward at a delightful tutoring camp in Maine.

Miss Holdren goes to her home in Marietta, Ohio.

Miss Myers will be on vacation in August, but where, is at present undecided.

Mrs. Murphey's many friends among the Faculty and students will be glad to know that she is again at her post at M. V. S., a satisfactory sign of her restoration to health.

Miss Hopkins, after a few weeks with her brother in Washington, will visit friends in the mountains of Virginia.

Miss Carroll, who is as much at home in Europe as in America, is again sailing May the thirtieth.

Miss Brown will be with her family in Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Mlle. Moulé is joining the M. V. S. colony in Europe. She will be at her home in France.

Miss Jean Pearson will motor to Florida for a few weeks' stay and spend the rest of her vacation in New Jersey.

Miss Leino goes to her home in Ely, Minnesota.

PERSONALS

"Unfortunately there are but two living who were in my class, '77, at M. V. S., Juliet Everts Robb and Carrie Gillis—it has been a long time since I've heard from them.

As for myself, my grandchildren occupy some of my time. It has been my pleasure in the past year to organize the Indianapolis Garden Club. A few years since, upon the loss of my husband and daughter, my city home was dismantled and my garden, the first semi-formal one in Indianapolis, passed away under a City Garage. I moved to my farm and have been developing a country home.

About five years ago, I organized a Children's Museum which has flourished greatly. We have had over twenty thousand gifts of objects. The Public Schools enthusiastically cooperate, and an average of twenty thousand children a month climb the front steps to enjoy the Museum.

The responsibility of building a Memorial to the Indiana Pioneer Mother now rests upon my shoulders as the founders of the society have passed away. The Society organized to build this monument was the first of its kind in the country.

My daughter, Martha, who made herself felt in the philanthropies of Indianapolis, left behind her, when she passed away, the result of her efforts in Christamore Settlement. The Settlement House was named Martha Stewart Carey, in memory of her devotion to Christamore."

MARY STEWART CAREY.

"There were but four of us to begin with, and only two are still living, Ida Andrus, retired after her years of teaching and living quietly in Indianapolis, and myself.

As for me, I live a very busy and happy life here in my old family home in which our grandchildren will be the fifth generation to live. Mr. Griggs and I are still very well and active in spite of our seventy odd years, take part in all the church, club and public activities of the community, enjoy our books and flowers, and travel a good deal. My husband, in active law practice, is quite a public speaker on many subjects and we both give many travel talks to our friends.

"Warm greetings to all at Mount Vernon Seminary."

1879

"I have neither seen nor heard from the two other members of my class lately. Adalyn Smith Holden passed away this year. I can see very plainly Ida Hawley, she had such lovely taffy-colored hair. Carrie Bryan was a more reserved girl, I knew neither very well because they were day scholars and I was a boarder. The school on F Street was very small, only nine boarders when I graduated. Many tables of history did I learn to the rhythm of Heller's "Tarantella" trying to memorize as fast as the music went! How far away those days now are.

"I am sorry I can't be with you for the Reunion this year, but my spirit will be at M. V. S. and I wish you all happiness."

ANNA BAGGS KOEHNE.

1880

There are only two of us left from the Class of '80. It received so much attention last year upon the occasion of its Fiftieth Reunion, that I think we hardly deserve notice this year.

Last summer I had anticipated a trip to Europe with friends, but had to remain in Washington after the Reunion to recuperate from an acute attack of appendicitis. I spent the period of convalescence from my operation with my brothers and sisters. Most of this year has been spent in taking care of myself, and I have the audacity to think

I may yet get across the water. My daughter and I are making plans in that direction, hoping to sail in July.

How I would like to be at school again this year! I have so many friends in the Class of '81—Hattie, Nina, Nannie, Addie, Ella—.

My best wishes to all, and to the dear school.

CORA WALKER HAYES.

"The privilege of growing up in the home with Miss Walker, has meant that I have had not only the loving and devoted care of my own dear mother, but that of Miss Walker as well. Always there to guide me with a steady hand, to teach me the things that are worth while, to show me through her own life the joy of unselfish giving; how to cultivate a sense of humor, to use my mind, and to find no task too mean to call for the best that is in me. And now I find her, with her broad knowledge of human nature, standing ready to help me meet my problems with my children.

"There are not many who have been blessed with two mothers as have I. My dearest wish is that she may in some way realize to the fullest what she has meant to me from the beginning and will mean to my end.

"To her I pledge my deep devotion and loyalty."

HELEN YEATMAN DOUGHTY.

Editor's Note—When the above tribute to Miss Walker was received, it was accompanied by the following note; "When you asked me to send some word of Miss Walker, you asked for an impossibility—for she is so wrapped up in my life that nothing short of volumes could serve . . . ."

The additional "fifty cents-es" presented to the Class at their Golden Jubilee have been entrusted for safe-keeping to Cornelia Irby Morgan, the efficient but self-effacing Treasurer of the Elizabeth J. Somers' Chapel Fund and co-deviser with Anne Seymour Ames, of ingenious methods of obtaining and utilizing donations. They are now on a still hunt for inside shutters for the Chapel and are rejoicing in a generous contribution from Stella Ford Schlotman and her daughter, Josephine.

1888

Four members of the Class were present at the Reunion, and the other four do not know what they missed!

Mattie Lemon Cissel is moving into a lovely rose-covered bungalow located at 3707 Brandywine St.

Addie Burr Clark telegraphed her regrets saying Jane was receiving her Ph. D. at Columbia June 2, and on the 4th they were all sailing for Europe to rest awhile. She sent her love and congratulations to Miss Walker.

Clara Ford Nesbit was on a week-end trip with her husband and so regretted it came on this particular week-end.

Nannie Skillman was too busy at Croyden Inn to be away on Saturday, and sent her sincere regrets. She and Rachel will spend two months as usual at their Camp on Lake Sunapee, N. H.

Ada Stinemetz hopes to spend her vacation at the seashore.

Nellie Clephane and family will go for part of the season to their cottage in Maine.

Mary Bradford Stone expects to go as a Delegate to the Y. W. C. A. Summer Conference at Silver Bay the last of July. She spent Easter in Boston with her son, Winchester, who is studying for his Masters Degree at Harvard, having graduated from Dartmouth last June.

1889

An engagement of the daughter of one of the members of '89 has been recently announced. Miss Frances De Pauw Seaman, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Seaman (Florence Leyden De Pauw), of Los Angeles, is engaged to Mr. James Hunter Meriwether of Kansas City. The wedding will be an event of the early fall, although no date is settled as yet.

News comes of the daughter of Louise McWilliams West, of Chicago. Helen West Cannon, who was married in 1928, now has a little daughter, Louise Carolyn, born October 17, 1930. Helen is a graduate of De Pauw University and her husband was a classmate, both having achieved Phi Beta Kappa Honors.

1890

From Ina Taft Atkinson, the following note was received: "I am very much 'house-bound' largely because my mother, at eighty-four, has no other source of companionship. All other things have had to be put aside to fill her empty hours and in such a quiet trend of life, there is not much of news for the Annual.

1891

Phila Calder Nye sent a very full article to the Roll Call last fall on the archeological work in which she is engaged. She writes that not only is she still doing the same thing, but that she thinks she will continue that pursuit just as long as she possibly can, "then some one else will have to go on—indefinitely. It is a stupendous task, but an engrossing one."

Clara Seipp Bartholomay has her days filled with hospital work, and is actively interested in the musical life of Chicago, the Opera, Symphony Concerts, and many other activities during the busy winter in that city. She spends a quiet summer at her home in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, surrounded at all times by her family and grandchildren, of whom there are five. She writes of her classmate, Elsa Durant Mower, also a Chicagoan who is making a name for herself in her work, and who is at all times a credit to '91, and sends as well her warmest wishes to her dear Alma Mater for all possible success in the future.

1893

Blanche Swope Mirick has just received the splendid news that her son, Henry, who is taking a post-graduate course in architecture at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Fine Arts, has been awarded the fellowship of the American Academy in Rome for 1931. Young Mr. Mirick is twenty-five years old, and a graduate of Princeton University.

1897

We are glad to report that Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips, mother of Grace Phillips Johnson, has recovered from a serious fall—one effect of which was a broken hip.

1899

Floretta Elmore Schriber has a daughter who has been at Mt. Vernon for the past four years. She has just received her certificate from the Secondary School and is to take the College Entrance Board examinations in June, to enter Vassar next fall.

Elizabeth Lucas Stevens has a daughter, Carol, at the University of California taking an architectural course. While in New York, Helen Palmer Pinkham gave a luncheon for Elizabeth Stevens, and many M. V. S. girls, both school-mates and classmates had a splendid reunion. Mrs. Stevens also visited Floretta Schriber, who was her room-mate, at her lovely new home, Shadowlawn, in Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

Helen Palmer Pinkham and her daughters, Helen Andrus and Dorothy, sailed last winter on the S. S. Saturnia for an extended European trip. Dorothy is quite a tennis player, having competed in many large tournaments abroad, and played with noted champions.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Schriber were at M. V. S. at Thanksgiving. At the dance held in the evening, the tale Mr. Schriber tells is that he danced from 8:30 to midnight without stopping as all of the 133 girls cut in on him, and he had to call quits for the first time in his life.

1900

Lucy Tolerton Kirkley was eagerly looking forward to attending this year's Reunion. She had come from her home in California and was stopping with friends in Ohio when she was called back by the serious illness of a very intimate friend. Not only is she disappointed, but we who were looking forward to seeing her, were equally so.

In Grace Janney's highly specialized kindergarten work no day lacks its little story. "Tiny immigrant America clings to her skirts in terror and is comforted; naughty immigrant America melts into virtue under her gentleness; sturdy immigrant America blossoms under her care."

Faith Bradford sends excellent news of her classmates:

Jessie Dimmick Van Deusen is general superintendent of her "very modern church school." She also has an adult class, wives of the men under Mr. Van Deusen. Jessie also has an active interest in Girl Scouts, and is, in fact, Captain of a Troop.

Yet with all of her outside interests she is first of all a very happy wife and mother. Her son, Lawrence Reed, has two more years at the University of Pennsylvania Law School, but in August is going to add matrimony to his career. Harry Reed, Jr., is to graduate from De Pauw University in June and will follow his brother's footsteps to Pennsylvania Law.

Mary Prince Noll writes: "I have two fine sons who just at present make life worth while. One is twenty-two and left the University of Virginia, which he adored, to take care of his father's business. I hope he may return next year. My other son, thirteen years old, is the terror of the family! He has red hair like mine. He is entered at the Pawling School for next year."

Margaret Cox Wooldridge writes proudly of her son, Luke Cox, twenty-six years old, who is holding an engineering job for the Louisiana State Highway Commission, at Marion, Louisiana. Her other son, Charles, is at the University of Kentucky. The chief interest of her daughter, Margaret, is the First Century Christian Fellowship of New York City.

1902

Belle Hinman Lammers spared a moment to write and say that "1931 is a year of interesting events for the Lammers family. On June 14th, Mr. Lammers and I will celebrate our 'Silver Wedding' anniversary, and on the next day Gertrude (Class of '29) will graduate from Northwestern University. Edward, her twin brother, is a Junior at Princeton University. This summer he is going to Yellowstone Park with a Geology Expedition of which Dr. Richard M. Field is the head. The most important object of the work is to discover the nature of the Phylolites of the Tertiary Age.

1903

Mary Belle Hudson Hanson spent a morning in April at the School. Her old friends enjoyed seeing her, particularly Miss Walker, who, after luncheon at the Mayflower spent a delightful afternoon with her and Helen Hibbs Legg at Helen's home.

Marie Reed Granger was a welcome visitor to the School. An enthusiastic one, too, she proved to be as it was her first glimpse of the New M. V. S. Marie's daughter will come to us in 1932.

1904

Mrs. Alfred Potter, who has a daughter, Helen Ray, at Mt. Vernon, says she had a thoroughly delightful and informing visit to M. V. S. during the week of the Council meeting. "It is an honor to be an Alumna of so progressive and 'forward looking' a school."

1906

The Class of 1906 celebrated their Twenty-Fifth Reunion at the Annual meeting this year. Miss Cole in a special moment of reminiscence said: "They gave me my first impression of what boarding school life was like—I had never been inside one—a great initiation! . . . I wonder what they would have done with our athletic facilities, our tennis and basketball courts, baseball diamond, and hockey field—they with their flowing skirts, high pompadours, and wasp-like waists. . . . I've always cherished a peculiarly motherly feeling toward the Class of 1906." It was a keen disappointment to them that their class president, Lovie Spry Keyes, could not be there. In her absence, her old room-mate, Dorothy Willing, responded to their cordial welcome, bits of which are as follows:

"This is a very important occasion for our class. We are proud of having attained a twenty-fifth anniversary . . . our much greater pride lies in the fact that we lay claim to Miss Cole as our very own, for we were her first Senior Class, and none other than 1906 can claim that distinction. We don't want to brag too much, but we were the largest graduating class up to that time. Three have answered the last Roll Call, and now, after twenty-five years there are twenty-five of us. One lives in Japan and the others are scattered through eight of these United States and the District of Columbia. Three-fourths of the class are married. . . ."

Helen Slater Mallory has just been elected President of the Columbian Women, an organization composed of the women graduates and wives of the Faculty of George Washington University and which sponsors women's scholarships.

Elizabeth Baum, "Bess," as she was known at school, is very busy at present, assisting her sister Katherine with her coming marriage on Friday the 29th of May. Bess is to have the reception at her house. Last November Phila Milbank McFie spent a night at Bess', who was her old room-mate, "we had such a grand old-time visit." Bess' daughter is at Miss Walker's school, and her son, Jack, is just completing his freshman year at Princeton, following in his father's footsteps. Phila has a daughter, Virginia, who is following in her mother's footsteps and is graduating from M. V. S. this year.

Jean Cudahy Wilhelm has returned to Chicago after spending three years in Pasadena, and is now occupying a beautiful new apartment overlooking Lincoln Park. Her son, Edward, is in a boy's school in Tuscon, Arizona. Her daughter, Jean, is at the Chicago Latin School for Girls.

Sybil Dugan Dillman attended the M. V. S. Society Luncheon in New York last November. Her daughter is attending Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, New York.

Nora Forthman Meyer and her talented musical daughter visited M. V. S. last February and were charmed with the surroundings. Madeline gave a splendid piano recital last June and is working on another to be given next October. She will not be eighteen until next September and is already a very brilliant and finished musician.

Harriet McGill Fickinger's daughter, Caroline, is back at M. V. S. for her second year.

Phila Milbank McFie, in writing the Editor, left the item on herself to the latter's discretion. After joining the ranks of her mother's Alma Mater, Virginia is to sail with her, and with her grandmother on the Bremen for a three months' sojourn abroad. Her younger sister is coming on for Commencement and she also has inclinations to follow in her sister's and mother's footsteps in about 1934.

Mrs. McFie speaks of having seen Helen Unger Brown at the Alumnae luncheon in New York. "We had not met since graduation—she has changed less than any of us, I believe, and looked just as young, with her same jovial disposition, as she did in 1908.

1910

Helen Cudahy Niblack of Lake Forest, Illinois, was in Middleburg for the recent Race Meeting. Both she and Mr. Niblack are enthusiastic sportsmen, Mr. Niblack being M. F. H. of the Lake Forest Hunt.

1916

"This spring—this would be our fifteenth reunion and we had hopes of gathering together to celebrate in Washington, but after so financially depressing a winter another year would find us all better able to forget our family budget. I heard from nearly every one at Christmas time. Lois Mayer has spent a great deal of time with her sister this spring upon the sudden death of her sister's husband in Kansas. In the course of this past year she has seen Marguerite Foster McCrary, Florence Harmon Polk and Lucy Ball Owsley, relaying facts to me of Marguerite's new house, Florence's plan of travel for the next year with her husband who is convalescing from an aeroplane accident some time ago. Sara Davidson May and I correspond quite regularly in an earnest endeavor to move one family or the other back and forth from Pittsburgh. It seems we must be content with flying visits between trains, but it is better than not seeing her family at all however, and Sally and I always manage to gather up the threads where we left off. Somehow that seems to be a virtue common to everyone of 1916 and a comforting fact to me for I am convinced that even though we do not have the reunion this spring—next year, or five years hence will find us all just as eager and enthusiastic to jump the span of twenty-years and carry on."

WILLIAMINE GARDNER COOK.

M. V. S. was represented at the Federation of Girls Schools Societies in Pittsburgh by Sara Davidson May who was elected second vice-president.

1921

Miss Cole was the advisor to the Class of 1921, and so felt very keenly her congratulation upon the occasion of their Tenth Reunion. She remembered "their able President," and the Ingenuity Contest, "a tapestry, one of the cleverest and most well-sustained pieces of work I have ever seen, and oh, the yards of blank verse that went with it! The only thing I have against the Class is that they promised me a copy of it and I never got it!" The Senior essays, on Asia, and the Class Play, "If I were King," with the leading role taken by Dorothy Schmidt . . . .

"so it is a very delightful and happy memory that you bring back to your Tenth Reunion, and especially for the loyalty and devotion with which you have followed up these ten years with your gift."

Claire Yates on her honeymoon brought her husband, Mr. Alan M. Foresman, out to see her friends and her school.

1923

Helen Horrocks Pearce is very busy taking care of her small daughter, Mary Ann. She also runs a Circulating Library in her home and takes an active part in dramatics in Torresdale, producing as well as acting in amateur plays.

Virginia Woolfolk spent the winter in Florida as usual, and from all reports has become quite a golfer. One of her greatest pleasures is entertaining her sister Louise's children when they visit their grandmother.

The president of the Class, Jane Robinson Hartman, has been living in New Mexico for two and a half years and is very enthusiastic about it. She is planning to be in Washington for the reunion for 1933. Her message to the Annual is: "I adore New Mexico, but it is too far away from Washington and M. V. S."

Gretchen Kayser, a member of the Pasadena Junior League, made her first appearance at the Pasadena Community Play House as "Babette" in "Her Shop."

Gertrude Meacham Greenshields followed up her graduation with a secretarial course and one in stage design under Lee Simonson. Now doing the housework, and caring for her baby leaves no extra time on her hands to engage in many outside activities.

Elizabeth Stauffer Ludgate called at the school during Easter Vacation. She was disappointed in missing her friends and they, equally so, in not being here to greet her.

1924

Harriet Pilch Hewson and her husband moved into their new home in Madison this spring.

Polly Schoder joined friends in Europe last summer and enjoyed with them a motor tour of several weeks, returning to this country in July.

1925

Jane Connell has accomplished quite a feat. After two years at the University of Wisconsin and two more years of pre-medic work, she has been accepted at Northwestern Medical, one of six girls out of several hundred candidates. She has had a fine standing all year and is so thrilled and interested. She will be a full-fledged M.D. when she graduates.

Emma Carter Szabo, on her way to Philadelphia, made a short call at M. V. S. Later she sent us a charming picture of her ten-months-old son.

After attending the M. V. S. Council here in April, Betty Paxton and Dorothy Davidson Coleman visited Henrietta Le Stage Clarke in Brookline, Mass. Betty later was the guest of M. V. S. girls in Evanston.

1926

Eleanor Hayden is playing at the Adelphi Theatre in Chicago in "The Ninth Guest," a thrilling mystery play. She played recently in "Your Uncle Dudley." Her cousin, Helen Marie Castle, of Chicago, is in the Secondary division at M. V. S. now.

We are the recipients of a most attractive snapshot of Pauline Gaut Boyd's four-months-old daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Olson (Dorothy Koenig) are now living in Washington, D. C.

Dorothy Thompson was recently selected to preside over the opening of Fiesta Week in San Antonio, Texas. Her official title was, "Queen Hera of the Court of Olympus."

1928

Marguerite Herrick is in her father's office in a Canal Zone Hospital. Shirley Hobbins graduated from the University of Wisconsin in June, 1930, another M. V. S. graduate who has successfully carried on her work in a Senior College.

1929

Martha Alexander and Margaret Murphy are together again! This time they are at Stanford University where we expect to see them "shine" under each other's benign influence.

Louise Redfield McAlpin has presented her Class with its first baby. Too bad it's a boy and can't come to M. V. S. Best wishes to Louise and her son.

Jane Cochran was married on Founder's Day. Mary Vereen was in her Bridal party. In the midst of the excitement, however, they were not too thrilled to forget the significance of the day, and wired greetings to M. V. S. Mary came back to take Mrs. McAllister's place for three months this winter, and again her ability proved invaluable.

Dorothy Bovenizer Donovan is in Europe just at present, with "Jerry."

Marjorie Riach and Sue Bradley are active in the Chicago Chapter and engrossed in Junior League work.

"Susan" Wegener is continuing her studies at the University of Chicago, and Jean Syminton is looking forward to graduating in the first class to go out from Scripps College. Ruth Wheeler was prevented by illness from continuing at school this past winter.

Gertrude Lammers, not content to rest upon her laurels when she graduates from Northwestern University this June, is returning to take her Master's degree.

Marjorie Kaiser has been at the School of Social Science Research in New York City, and Peggy Johnson is again at the Grand Central Art School, while Mollie Bennett is at Mills College.

Tattie Howell was back at M. V. S. last fall to edit the Roll Call, and Mary Elizabeth Haradon, better known as

1930

To take them in alphabetical order, we have from the Class of 1930, first of all:

Connie Bavinger: Occupation at present. School in Geneva, Switzerland, but mostly vacationing at Munich and San Moritz.

Remarks: We hear that Connie loves it. She rides a bicycle everywhere, and we have a life-size picture of Connie attending lectures in French!

Betty Bingham: Occupation at present. Katharine Gibbs Secretarial School in Boston. She has all sorts of plans as to where she would like to get a position, and at just what price! Betty attended the first Class Reunion.

Mary Lou Bonthron: Occupation at present. Also schooling in Geneva. She is of course continuing her Art work.

Eleanor Bovenizer: Occupation. Keeping in touch with the members of the Class. She has not as yet relinquished her Presidential duties.

Remarks: Besides scribbling letters to her classmates, she takes piano lessons. She also has the busy job of Secretary for the New York Chapter.

Virginia Bryson: Activities during the past year. Mainly a visit to California and one to a hospital. She is well on the road to complete recuperation, and we were only too sorry not to have had her here for the all-important First Reunion.

Julia Cottrell: Occupation. Julie has been the globe trotter of the Class, in the past few months having been in Germany, Switzerland, France, Italy, Egypt, etc. She dropped in just before the last day of Commencement week, but informs us that she has had her own reunion in Switzerland with Connie and Mary Lou.

- Ione Foster. Occupied with the pursuit of knowledge at Rockford College in Illinois. She was at M. V. S. in the fall for the opening of the Field House Shop.
- Wilma Koenig: Another member in quest of a higher education. Billie is at Wisconsin rooming with "Texas" Simpson, '29.
- Florence Krueger: Has been rather quiet and modest about her activities, but has been at home all winter.
- Nancy Lee: Occupation. Took courses in Dramatic Expression (which we expect to see her make use of at Commencement) and in French.
- Remarks: She was also a member of a French Club, but says she was the silent member.
- Eleanore Roberts: Is Secretary of the California Chapter and has been at home all winter acquiring "that enviable sun-tan."
- Jane Robertson: Occupation. University of Nebraska. Ah, these members of '30! But Jane was always studying so it is only second nature that she should continue.
- Marianne Stevenson: Occupation. Still stumbling down the rocky road to wisdom, this time at the University of Chicago, where she is a member of Mortar Board.
- Jeanné and Katherine Street: Occupation. Having left these sheltered walls the Streets are now thoroughly launched in the sea of Chicago society. They made a joint debut at a tea last September, and have since been occupied with Junior League, Service Club (the Cupola prophecy was not far from wrong!) and Fashion Shows.
- Rosalind Vereen: A short visit to New York and to M. V. S. on her way home was much enjoyed by Rossie and by those who saw her. She has been occupied with a secretarial course all winter.
- Fay Wilson: Occupation. University of Texas, where, Fay regrets to say, she is unable to keep up with her harp lessons. We shall all feel most distressed also, if Fay does not continue to play the harp.

Lucille Winter: Occupation. Helping her prospective doctor husband to get established in his office. She was also on the Woman's Committee of the Detroit Symphony.

Note

To all who so kindly answered the "call for personals" the Editor wishes to extend her grateful thanks. A special effort was made to get something from every class, but from many there was no communication. Were there space to print a personal thanks to each one with whom I have been in correspondence, the book would be full of enthusiastic notes to many in response to their valued and appreciated assistance. Next year we hope to hear from all those classes that are not represented this year. The Editor also wishes to thank those who wrote such interesting and charming articles, the contents of which serve to make this book of value for something beside addresses alone.

*M.V.S. Teacher, for years Faculty Editor of the Annual, this

DEDICATED

ALICE E. EDWARDS

MANY years ago in the old school there appeared, one day, a little twelve-year-old girl with serious eyes and wonderful chestnut hair hanging in long curls. She was quickly known as "Elsie, Mrs. Somers' niece" who had come to live with her. And a gifted child Elsie Edwards was, with musical, literary and artistic ability in such generous measure as to lead one to wonder which was the gift—a question never really answered. Added to these unusual gifts was a lovely sense of humor that was worthy of Mrs. Somers herself, and doubtless was one of the ties that bound them so closely through the years.

A picture in the Record (the forerunner of the Broadside) reveals her as Editor-in-Chief of that paper while very young. In 1893 she was graduated and went to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and later spent several years in Europe where she was a pupil of Charles Lasar and of Whistler. But, at Mrs. Somers' earnest solicitation, she spent much of her time in the cultivation of her voice—a rich mezzo-soprano, which she accompanied with marked ability on the piano. Throughout the intervening years she has painted, often in the summertime at Provincetown, sometimes under Charles Hawthorne and others, and sang, and—edited the Alumnae Annual for five years!

She taught with equal success, singing and art—this last year giving a course in Costume Design at the school. Of late years much of her teaching was at the Y.W.C.A. whither she was doubtless drawn by Mrs. Somers' interest, expressed in her generous gift of the furnishings of the school as well as a nominal selling price for the school itself, and the fact that the residence hall (1100 M Street) is called The Elizabeth Somers. For many years she has been active in The Friday Morning Music Club where she has often given programs, at the Arts Club where she has exhibited, and as a soloist of the vested choir of All Souls' Memorial Church—for she was a devout churchwoman.

We would have cherished her because she was Mrs. Somers' niece; we would have cherished her for the years of unfailing devotion to Mrs. Somers for until Mrs. Somers' death she never considered her own desires in any way but gave herself unremitt-tingly to Mrs. Somers' care. But we cherish her for herself. She possessed those qualities which enriched all those whose lives she touched. Who will ever forget her never-failing humorous turn of every conversation in which she shared—her Spoonerisms—her contagious chortle? Who has not witnessed the lavish, disinterested use of her gifts? Who has not felt her generosity in all that was hers? Who is not the finer in the memory of her unswerving loyalty to friend and cause? She was characterized by an aloofness of soul that made her live in a world few even of her devoted friends ever penetrated; an impersonal quality on her relationships that united her friends with her in interests rather than intimate revelations; she withdrew immediately from an atmosphere charged with personalities and none can recall her ever joining in petty gossip, however harmless. Yet how large a group of her school girl friends waited with anxious hearts the daily bulletins of her last illness! How unusually large a group of friends today feel an emptiness in her going. Loyal as only a self-effacing nature can be, she inspired loyalty in all who knew her.

She loved life and lived it gracefully!

JEAN DEAN COLE.

Read at The Friday Morning Music Club meeting, April 15, 1932, by the President, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes:

Will the audience rise a moment while we pay a tribute to our dear Alice Elsie Edwards, who passed away a week ago.

We have lost a dear friend, a valued member and officer of The Friday Morning Music Club.

Alice Elsie Edwards made for herself a place in our work and in our hearts.

Music was a joy to her, she has sung for us, many times, during her years of membership.

Her life was one of service, generously given. We shall always keep in mind her presence, her gifts, she did so many, many things in so quiet and capable a way. She endeared herself to all who were near her in her useful life. Her memory is a sweet one.

Friday, April 15 1932.

In many ways, one of the hidden servants of the Lord—she was so inconspicuous and modest in her deeds of kindness, her Christian service. Though an active member of St. Paul's Parish, she gave herself to All Souls' also. For over four years she sang in our choir, with singular regularity and devotion. We could feel the sweetness of her spirit in her singing, her reverence, her smiling companionship. We shall continue to feel the blessing of her presence. The tie that binds is not broken. It is touched with glory.

THE ALUMNAE REUNION

THE 57th Annual Reunion of the M.V.S. Alumnae Association was held in the Great Hall of the School, May 28th, 1932, Miss Elsie Foerderer, the President, in the chair. Miss Helen Myers presented the Class of 1932 and the President's greeting follows:

"Members of the Class of 1932:

"It is a pleasure to welcome you into the Alumnae Association, and I do so with confidence that you are ready to assume the obligations of faithful, active members.

"Mrs. Somers once said, 'Every work of the past is incomplete unless the present sustains it.' We are all conscious of what M.V.S. has achieved. Here spiritual values—all that makes for loftiness of thought and nobility of living—have been recognized as dominant. The promotion of the highest ideals has gone hand in hand with learning, with the result that this school occupies an enviable place in the field of education. Is that place to be sustained? If so, it is for us to zealously guard our golden heritage so that its glory may be increased and its influence be of ever-widening scope.

"It is a signal honor to be intrusted with the furthering of so noble a work as that of M.V.S.—one that requires both vision and service. In welcoming you into membership, we of the Alumnae Association ask that you join us in the spirit of co-operative fellowship, ready to advance the best interests of our Alma Mater by giving generously of your constructive thought, your unfailing loyalty and your devoted service."

The President of the Class of 1932, Miss Cornelia Lewthwaite, responded with a few gracious and well-chosen words.

Miss Cole then called the roll by classes. Mention was made of a great-granddaughter in the school—Betty Davis, daughter of Elizabeth Swartzell Davis and granddaughter of the first graduate of M.V.S., Minnie Naylor Swartzell.

Elizabeth Beall Leech, of the Golden Class, was present, and five members of the Silver Class responded. Frances Edmonston Rollow of this class presented a check for $200 from Kate Van Nuys Page to be used for Chapel, Library or Scholarship Fund.

Christine Schonblom Fisher, President of the Class of 1922, sent a letter giving news of the girls of this class which has contributed to the school the sum of $2,039.32, the amount of an insurance policy taken out at their graduation ten years ago.

Miss Cole suggested that greetings be sent Mrs. Fisher.

Thereupon Miss Walker made the following motion: "I move that a vote of thanks and appreciation from the Alumnae Association of Mt. Vernon Seminary be extended to Christine Schonblom Fisher for her valiant service as President of the Class of 1922 and to the Class itself for its highly valued ten years gift."

Miss Willis read a tribute to Elsie Edwards as her Class was called.

The following girls returned for their first reunion: Flora Kaiser, Shirley Stevens, Shirley Ross, Diantha Brown, Margaret McBride, Mary Wallace, Eleanor Reed Hamilton, Beth Kennedy, Carol Parker, Ilma Theurer and Frances Brinkman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were then read and approved. The report of the Corresponding Secretary was read and accepted.

The Treasurer's report, together with that of the Auditing Committee, were read and ordered filed.

Miss Willis announced that she had received $100 less from dues than were paid last year.

Miss Walker read the report of the Chapel Committee (Miss Ames, chairman) and in her own charming manner thanked Miss Ames for her splendid report.

Miss Cole then spoke of the Chapel shutters. The structural difficulties make it impossible to use shutters such as were planned. The architect suggests the use of shades. Miss Cole asked that money in hand for shutters be diverted to another purpose, namely a leaded glass screen to be placed above the present wooden one to improve the acoustics. Miss Willis moved this be done. Carried.

Miss Foerderer then brought up the advisability of combining the Alumnae Annual and the Roll Call, as a matter both of economy and efficiency. She suggested that the matter be discussed, committees appointed and yet that no action be taken for another year. Much discussion followed, resulting in the following motion. Motion: "That the President be empowered to appoint a committee to consider the details connected with the merging of the Alumnae Association and the M.V.S. Society." Carried.

There being no further business, the meeting then adjourned.

Miss Cole invited the members to a "surprise" in the Chapel, and there they listened, enraptured, to the Chimes and Harp Accompaniment (a gift of the Class of 1912) as an addition to the organ.

THE REPORT OF THE ELIZABETH SOMERS CHAPEL FOR 1932

The activities of the Chapel, from a material point of view, have been somewhat negative, since five gifts only have come toward the "Inside Shutter Fund," namely, $65.00 from the Graduate Alumnae, $65.00 from the M.V.S. Society, $50.00 given by Stella Ford Schlotman and her daughter, the anniversary gift of $68.00 from the Class of 1906 and the sum of $65.00 sent by the Adelia Gates Hensley Chapter. All of these are most generous and have been deeply appreciated, while added to that must be counted the balance of $403.08 from the Chapel savings that augments the total fund to $716.08, but as far as a crisp business report goes, the chairman should retire until a more prosperous 1933 would offer greater inducements for more lengthy recitals. Nevertheless, this is the bicentennial, when we appraise spiritual assets with a deep sense of our rich and potential past, and as we think of our Chapel, in the year of our Lord 1932, the chairman finds herself, like Keats, "Tip-toe upon a little hill," from which gentle eminence she can face not only the fair future but the once problematic past.

A question comes up at this reunion concerning the advisability of including in a broader fellowship the word Alumnae, so that the two distinctive groups, graduates and non-graduates might yet stand shoulder to shoulder in the shelter of one Alma Mater. Because there was so beautiful a blending in loyalty and service in the building of our Chapel, perhaps none can speak with more experience than the members of the Chapel Committee. If ever there was a "Road of loving hearts," the way to the Chapel was that road. Literally, every part of that Memorial represented the starry pilgrimage of the wise men, bearing gold, frankincense and myrrh. Many voices, silent for years, became articulate in words and sacrificial gifts. There are on record remembrances from every single year in the school's history. In these difficult years of building, there was no distinction between graduates and non-graduates, but the perfect coming together of what Mrs. Somers used to call "my daughters." There is proof of this in every part of the Elizabeth Somers Chapel. One cannot approach the four lovely entrance columns without realizing that, while the two portal columns are the gift of faculty and loyal girls, then resident, the other two columns, flanking them to right and left, are the gifts of Marjorie Post Hutton and Sallie Huston Rowe, both non-graduates.

Instances of sacrifice are so numerous that it is very difficult to particularize, yet there are two lovely self-abnegating illustrations our Chapel Committee can never forget—the fine spirit of a graduate alumna who in giving so large a gift that she could have easily left her name in a conspicuous memorial, yet preferred to average the sum in a Class pew, and the other, a non-graduate, who with almost as large a gift, submerged her name also in adding to the useful but uninteresting necessity of bricks and mortar.

Therefore, in this momentous year of the bicentennial, when we re-value spiritual assets, there can be no finer work of co-operation than the constructive fellowship of one common body of alumnae, made up of two groups, but moving into higher usefulness as one indivisible Mount Vernon Seminary.

So in this patriotic year we are not afraid of the future nor ashamed of our past, but we lift high our beautiful emblem, with the red of sacrifice, the white of blessed memory and the blue of abiding faith and loyalty.

WINDOW IN THE METROPOLITAN MEMORIAL METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH ON NEBRASKA AVENUE

The three windows in the Baptistry of this Church, entitled "The Baptism of Jesus," were given by the Metropolitan Ladies Association in memory of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Somers, the Founder of Mt. Vernon Seminary, and as a testimony of appreciation of the privilege of using the Elizabeth Somers Chapel.

During the Church's removal and rebuilding on Nebraska Avenue, within two blocks of M.V.S., the services all last year were held in the Elizabeth Somers Chapel, giving much pleasure to both the pupils and the congregation gathered there.

Mrs. Somers was a sister of Rev. Dr. Thomas Eddy, a former pastor of this Church, and she herself was for many years a Bible teacher in the Metropolitan Church School.

GIFTS TO M.V.S. IN 1932

"The Mythology of All Races," in 13 volumes. Presented by Phila Calder Nye, '91.

"Men of Art," by Cravin, and "The Life of Robert Burns," by Snyder, presented by Miss Ashley, who was a guest at the school during the Alumnae Council Meeting.

A Banner of the Colonial Period, which has been hung at the entrance to the Great Hall. The background is bright blue silk, upon which is embroidered, in shaded browns, an eagle with outstretched wings. Over all the thirteen gold stars and below the words "E Pluribus Unum." This banner was presented by Marjorie Post (Mrs. Edward F. Hutton).

On a recent visit to California Mildred Williamson, '21 (Mrs. Ivan M. Johnston) sent to the school a handsome reproduction of a page from one of the earliest editions of Chaucer, now in the Huntington Library.

Four rare, hand-colored engravings of English Cathedrals, suitably framed and bearing the date 1827. Presented by Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Hecht, Jr. (Margaret Lipps, '14).

"The Life and Letters of Sir Edmund Gosse." Presented to the Library by Jean Syminton, '29, who also gave the Roll Call, of which she was editor, the sum of twenty-five dollars.

A recent edition to the collection of brasses at the Field House is an immense antique Samovar, which Miss H. Grace Brouse brought over from Europe last summer and presented to M.V.S.

ALUMNAE LUNCHEON

This being the bicentennial year of Washington's birth, the luncheon decorations were along patriotic lines. Rachel Coffin's Toy Shop furnished the place cards (a silhouette of the father of his country). The nut baskets were made of red, white and blue paper. The flowers, in the three colors, on each table, were from Nellie Clephane's garden and were arranged very effectively by her.

Marguerite Weller Hynson acted as toastmistress and very cleverly carried out the bicentennial idea in likening the early life of Washington to the early days of M.V.S. The character-building qualities instilled into Washington by his wonderful mother, which made for success in later years were compared with the early years of the School on F Street and its beginning at 1100 M Street, when the daily contact with Mrs. Somers moulded and influenced the lives of the students and the policy of the school. Miss Elizabeth Beall Leech, of the Class of 1882, represented this period of the school's history and gave a brief sketch of the school in her day, followed by anecdotes from Miss Walker, Cornelia Morgan and others.

Washington's young manhood and the later period of his greater military and political activities were likened to the M.V.S. of twenty-five years ago, when the school's influence widened, with larger enrollment, larger faculty and broader curriculum.

To resume the analogy—Washington's work during these years was preparatory to the building and setting in motion the wheels of the great new nation which he saw safely launched before retiring to Mt. Vernon, just as Mrs. Somers and Mrs. Hensley, during this period, directed the work leading up to the new school. Frances Edmonston Rollow '07, Rose Robertson Lowry '07, Josephine Eddy '08 and Clara Hoskins Willett, Jr., '12 spoke of this period.

Then came the part of Washington's life at Mt. Vernon, when the new nation was a reality, living and growing in territorial extent and national prestige and influence. This corresponds to the period at the new school, growing in numbers and influence, in material possessions, more land, the Chapel, the Field House, the Outdoor Gym, etc., still with its problems of Junior College, wider scope of subjects, just as the growing nation had its increasing problems.

The Class of 1922 represented this period, and it was their generous gift that made the organ recital so enjoyable. Mary Henderson was the only member of this class present. Miss Ballou then told of the fine results obtained by M.V.S. students in the recent College Board Examinations. Shirley Ross, Vice-President of the Class of 1931, then told of the splendid records made by members of her class in college and in other fields during the past year.

The toastmistress then went on to say: "Nothing is ever really finished, for with the attainment of one goal other ideals and aspirations develop."

Mt. Vernon on the Potomac was long neglected until restored by the "Ladies Mt. Vernon Association." For many years the approach to it was unsightly, quite unworthy as a thoroughfare between a great Capital and its greatest shrine. Now the new boulevard along the river is a continuous beautiful poem of nature.

The M.V.S. Class of 1932 is rich in the poetic gifts of its members, and Katharine Cabel was called upon to read the Class Poem written by herself, which gave a fitting close to this Bicentennial Reunion.

THE COLLEGE SOPHOMORE EXAMINATIONS

On May 4 and 5, the Juniors and Seniors of the Junior College took the College Sophomore Examinations, sent us by the Co-operative Test Service under the auspices of the American Council on Education, and scored by the Educational Records Bureau.

Twenty thousand sophomores in 150 colleges and universities throughout the country took these tests on these days—a General Culture Test (including sections in Foreign Literature, Fine Arts, History and Social Studies, and General Science), and a Comprehensive English Test. The scores sent us late in May were accompanied by a set of scores based on the results of the tests taken by Pennsylvania College Sophomores only, and from these we have made a preliminary comparison.

It is evident that our Junior College students did well in their tests. For instance, in the Fine Arts Section, 14 Juniors and 13 Seniors had scores above the median or average for the Pennsylvania group; one student had a percentile rank of 99.9, another a score of 9 points above any score quoted.

In the English test, where the average score was 267 points, 8 of our girls had scores ranging from 300 to 490.

In the General Score, including all the tests, where the average was 467, one of our students made a total of 823, and other excellent scores were 685, 629, 619, 613, 609. Seventeen girls had scores above the median or average of the Pennsylvania group.

We shall await with interest the results from all the colleges taking these tests, and the opportunity for further comparison of our own group with the larger one.

M. A. BALLOU.

COMMENCEMENT

The festivities that attend graduation marked with appropriate and dignified gaiety the end of 1931-32. The house is never more attractive than when it is filled with the guests who come from afar to share the pleasures of Commencement.

On Friday morning the regular classes were set aside in deference to the schoolday activities. The program delighted every one. There was a sprightly presentation of Anatole France's, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," done in French with a happy facility—and numerous bits of highly original work gave the program a decided zest. On the evening of the same day, the music students participated in a recital at which violin, piano and vocal renditions were all creditably and enjoyably performed.

The Alumnae luncheon, so dear an occasion to all who cherish M.V.S. as their alma mater, fell, as usual, on Saturday. Just before luncheon there was an assembly in the chapel where announcement was made of the gift of the "harp" and the "chimes" for the organ by the Class of 1922. Then, the processional, beneath the garlanded arches gave gracious entrance to the dining-room, where the luncheon was held. Mrs. Marguerite Weller Hynson, the toastmistress, built her remarks cleverly into a bicentennial background, and the whole occasion was one of unforgettable charm.

For the intimate kind of an address that a Baccalaureate sermon should be, there can be no lovelier setting than the Elizabeth Somers Chapel. There, in the quiet of the declining day, Dr. Woolfall, Rector of St. Mark's, spoke to the members of the graduating class, impressing them deeply with the warmth of his personal appeal and with the convincing substance of his sermon. After the services, the friends and parents were invited to stay to the informal supper, which, on account of an unseasonable coolness, was prevented from being a cloister supper. The singing of class songs and traditional school songs brought the day to a happy close.

On Monday night, an enthusiastic audience applauded a very finished production under Miss Herriott's direction of Arthur Wing Pinero's play, "The Enchanted Cottage." The girls handled their parts with exceptional capability—a fantastic interlude in which several children from the Children's Village took part, gave to the play an unusual charm.

Tuesday was Class Day. The exercises took place in the gymnasium which was prettily decorated with ferns and daisies. After the program came the bonfire, into which were thrown all sorts of detestable objects—verse-laden—and then came the planting of a Japanese mimosa tree near the Adelia Hensley gate, with the attendant ceremonies of song and drinking from the loving cup for the last time. The Senior luncheon followed.

On Tuesday evening, Treble Clef, under Mrs. Payne's direction, gave their annual concert. The singing was spirited and beautiful, and the program a very pleasing one.

Commencement day dawned, bright with summer sunshine and sweet with the fragrance of blossoming roses. The Commencement procession wound its way to the gates where the memorial wreaths were put in place by Miss Brouse and Louise Raynor. Then the long line of academic participants, Seniors, and the student body made its way across the lawn to the chapel. The National String Quartette rendered the music for the morning; Dr. Robertson, the President of Goucher College, delivered a seasoned and timely address, and Miss Cole presented to the seventeen Seniors their diplomas from Mount Vernon Seminary. Flora Kaiser and Shirley Ross, members of the Class of 1931, marshalled the graduates and escorted them from the chapel for the last time, and over the whole scene fell the hush that comes with "thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears."

M. V. S. COUNCIL

April 19-22, 1932

The program of the second annual session of the M.V.S. Council was carried out to the last detail—the weather was beautiful, the delegates in high spirits—all sections of the country, except the far west, represented.

The formal meeting of the Council occurred on April 21—with the President, Katherine Higgins Riley, in the Chair. It was opened by a series of reports concerning school interests given by the present students and recorded elsewhere in this annual. These embodied changes suggested at the Council in 1931 which had led to modifications in the school policy the past year.

Abridged minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, at various points being interrupted by comments as follows:

1. Chaperonage

Miss Cole stated that a questionnaire had been sent to parents of girls in the Junior College concerning chaperonage. With two exceptions, parents were satisfied to have their daughters go back and forth to town, unchaperoned in the school car, but never in a taxi. The plan had worked most happily.

2. Schedule

It was announced that the former schedule had been reinstated with luncheon at 1:30 following the six fifty-minute periods of school work—and the usual break at noon for light refreshments.

3. Calling Lists

The open calling list had been denied by one or two parents but in the main had been granted to Juniors and Seniors. This allows a girl to receive any caller she desires, her parents trusting her to receive only those who, in their opinion, would be acceptable.

4. Sunday Tennis

This past year tennis has been permitted on Sunday at hours so arranged as not to conflict with church.

5. Uniforms

With the exception of five Juniors, and without opportunity for discussion, the members of the Junior College declared against abandoning uniforms. Even when Miss Cole's opinion was adverse to this expression, the girls desired to wear a yellow and white uniform on certain occasions, seemingly conscious that under such circumstances, the school appeared at its best.

6. Time

Mrs. Field, Miss Dwight, Miss Bingham and Miss Slaughter advocated greater freedom and more leisure, in the use of time, citing Sarah Lawrence.

Miss Cole registered her interest in creating the happiest environment possible for her girls consistent with a high standard of work. One change had been found feasible in this direction; the Survey of Civilization and Comparative Literature Courses now meet for a double period twice a week.

Miss De Lano suggested one free afternoon a week. Miss Cole replied that Wednesday afternoon is free from organized athletics except that each girl must be out of doors for an hour. Nothing was scheduled then except trips to Congress. Plays are voluntary and no girl is in more than one set of rehearsals. As the question of more leisure was pursued, Miss Cole agreed that the pressure of modern life is criminal—that the girl who is able is in demand. "We must present a variety of offerings. If we lower our requirements, the ambitious girl will overleap them. She wishes to figure in Music, Athletics, the Drama. We have a point system and prohibit a girl from holding too many offices, but in spite of all, many are rushed."

Several suggestions were made but the discussion ended with the problem unsolved. No motion made.

7. Week-Ends

The girls had one long week-end this year, an extra day having been given as substitute for Washington's Birthday. This permitted them to leave Thursday and return Sunday night. Junior College members and Form girls who have been in the school two years are granted one prom permission a year and an extra day on that occasion. Special permissions under very exceptional circumstances have been given, for instance, one of the Form girls was allowed to fly home for the week-end, making up the class she missed.

"Requests," said Miss Cole, "come from the parents but never from the girls for they realize our position and appreciate our desire to deal justly with all, in this matter especially."

The Chair then proceeded to appoint committees in accordance with the requirements of the Constitution.

1. Nominating Committee:

Miss Foerderer, Chairman

Mrs. Strauss

Miss Slaughter

2. Committee on Rules and Amendments:

Mrs. Nye, Chairman

Miss Dwight

3. The Chair suggested the appointment of a Committee on Resolutions. The motion was accordingly made by Mrs. Potter, seconded and carried that a Committee of Three be appointed by the Chair. The following will serve on that Committee:

Mrs. Hutton

Mrs. Field

Mrs. Dall

The Council then entered upon the discussion of the topic of main interest to this year's body:

"The Relation of the Alumnae to the School"

A questionnaire had been sent to delegates asking them to investigate schools in their vicinity. The answers to this questionnaire formed the basis for discussion.

Question No. 16. Have you an endowment fund? How is this supported by the alumnae?

Baldwin School—A small one.

Brownell Hall—(1) $75,000 interest is used exclusively for scholarships.

(2) $3,000 Alumnae fund interest used for same purpose.

Kent Place School—A small one not supported by the alumnae.

1. Apropos of Question 9 in the Questionnaire

Mrs. Hutton said that the Spence School Alumnae had raised $200,000 for a new building—also furnished the money for the maintenance of an orphanage.

The Baldwin School Alumnae, it was reported, had raised $500,000 in interest-paying bonds, many refusing to accept the money when the bonds matured, and in this way creating an endowment fund.

The Dobbs Ferry (Masters School) Alumnae own the school and are represented on the Board of Trustees.

2. Publicity

Miss Cole spoke of the new publicity venture undertaken by M.V.S. Three thousand brochures had been mailed out over a very carefully selected area—geographically distributed to parents with daughters of our school age, Porter Sargent handling the work and supplying the list. This brochure was followed by a letter and upon any expression of interest, a brochure of our own Junior College or Secondary School was sent containing fascinating glimpses of our buildings and school life.

Miss Cole feels that we have been very fortunate the past year in having one hundred and twenty-nine pupils since other schools have been short from twenty-five to fifty per cent—however, our own balance on the debit side is larger than we have ever had before. In publicity we will not lower our standard of quality for almost every new girl who comes here is recommended by a former patron. We do not advertise in magazines.

Through this Council it is possible to reach all sections of the country. Go back to your Chapters and ask their help and co-operation in registration for the future is uncertain. More catalogues are being sent out, more interest shown, but contracts are not being signed and we shall probably not know what next year's enrollment will be until September.

Should magazine advertising be desired, Mrs. Hutton advised Spur, Vogue, Town and Country. Miss Cole told of a new method, Group Advertising—which was superior to the usual geographic advertising, since it brought together a carefully selected group—twenty or more similar schools on a page.

3. Day Pupils

In response to a question as to acceptance of day pupils, Miss Cole mentioned two obstacles: one, the fact that unconsciously either the day school or boarding department is emphasized; the other, the lack of co-operation on the part of parents of non-resident girls.

But, she added, "it might be possible for us to admit day pupils in the Junior College. As this section is built up and the time comes when the community demands and really needs a private day schools for girls, I believe we could erect a separate building and in some way make it possible to meet that need and not disintegrate our world."

4. Use of the Word Alumnae

Discussion was opened as to whether we should continue to use the word "Alumnae" in a restricted sense. Mrs. Strauss spoke for the Adelia Gates Hensley Chapter of the M.V.S. Society as desiring the Alumnae Association to be open to non-graduates. Miss Ames told, with much feeling, her nine years' experience as Chairman of the Chapel Committee—the four columns of the Chapel being mute evidence of a common deep loyalty and enthusiasm—two having been given by graduates, two by non-graduates.

Discussion followed concerning the motion to show the preference of the Council in this matter and resulted in a resolution made by Miss Walker and seconded by Miss Ames.

"Resolved, that in the Alumnae Association of Mount Vernon Seminary, the word 'alumna' be used in the larger sense and include graduate and non-graduate members."

This consideration by the Council was to be presented to the Alumnae Association for such further action as was deemed desirable by them.

4A. Merging of Annual and Roll Call

Miss Walker addressed the Chair as follows:

"In accepting the new use of the word 'Alumna,' the two organizations would become one and the merging of the Roll Call and the Annual is involved. This year there have been some actual resignations because of inability, it was claimed, to pay dues to the two organizations. The Annual and the Roll Call are published at different times and though there are semi-occasional duplications minor in nature, the purpose in each is quite distinctive. One represents the Alumnae—the graduates of the school—the other was fashioned afterwards, in 1912, to be exact, with the concrete aim of bringing into the school, the spirit of love and loyalty that was a common heritage of all girls who had ever attended Mount Vernon Seminary. No one can deny that it has succeeded admirably in that effort. It seems that, in late years, the Roll Call has awakened more interest than the Annual. When we discussed in the Alumnae Association the possibility of giving up the Annual, the girls voiced a constant need of the list of addresses. I am chairman of a committee appointed by the President of the Alumnae Association to consider the question in all its issues. I realize that in the merging there would be involved the name of the new publication; the list of addresses, the relation of the present chapters to the new Alumnae Association. There could be, I am sure, no change in the voting privilege in chapters; and there would be a very active subject for contention on the rearrangement of dues. For those who belong to both organizations there would certainly be a sum less than the present $3.50 ($2.00 for the Alumnae Association and $1.50 for the M.V.S. Society), but these matters are not to be settled without serious deliberation over an extended period of time."

Mrs. Riley reiterated that the resolution concerning the larger use of the word "alumna" goes to the Alumnae Association simply as voicing the sense of the Council.

Other delicate questions would arise.

Mrs. Stone asked concerning the status of the present student body, a very important factor in the M.V.S. Society. Miss Cole spoke of the part Founders' Day, the fall meeting of the M.V.S. Society, had played in arousing and maintaining interest, and she might have added, the close tie formed in annual contributions of the Society to the Children's Hospital and the Elizabeth Somers Residence—a working together for a common good.

How, too, are we to affiliate as an entity and for a definite purpose the Washington group, small but of tremendous value to the school.

Miss Walker suggested that the school group might be called the Center and the Washington group a chapter. Three hundred members of the Alumnae Association also belong to the M.V.S. Society—they form twenty-five per cent of its membership.

Miss Cole added—"We want to be sure that we make it very clear to the Chapters that, for them, there is to be no change—they will function as usual."

The dues, however, are another matter. If we merged the two publications we could have a better one, larger and with more illustrations—yet without careful classification this would be impossible because of a lessened income.

25 per cent pay $3.50 (Alumnae members of both organizations)

75 per cent pay $1.50, non-graduates M.V.S. Society

75 per cent must pay more than $1.50, 25 per cent less than $3.50.

After consideration of these various questions by the Alumnae Association similar deliberation should be made by the M.V.S. Society and word be then sent to the various chapters. In them, serious discussion should occur, resolutions be offered by each Chapter and on next Founders' Day a joint meeting be called of the Alumnae Association and the M.V.S. Society.

Tremendous strength would result from much consideration—every one, everywhere, being given an opportunity to express her opinion.

Mrs. Dall reported the Jean E. Eddy Chapter as being greatly interested in the matter and of her having come to the Council with instructions to vote—not on merging the two organizations, but in having but one periodical and one register of names of all members every three years.

5. Mrs. Potter spoke of her interest in having girls who finish Fourth Form receive a special Fourth Form Certificate more ceremoniously. Miss Cole explained that the certificate was granted with ceremony. Discussion followed. Miss Cole, because of lack of time, could not give her views on this subject based on Mrs. Somers' experience but stated them in detail on School Day.

On motion of Mrs. Hutton, the meeting adjourned till five o'clock that afternoon.

The adjourned afternoon business meeting of the M.V.S. Council was called to order by the Chairman.

A message for great success in the deliberations, received from the Jean Dean Cole Chapter, was read by the Secretary, Miss Succop.

The Council stood in silence while Miss Cole told of the loss sustained by the Faculty and the School in the death of Miss Trippett in November, and that of Miss Edwards in April. Miss Walker then read, at Mrs. Riley's request, the exquisite tributes to these two beloved and valued members of the Faculty—written by Miss Cole and printed elsewhere in this Annual.

Mrs. Riley asked for reports from the Committee on Resolutions. Owing to the brief time which had elapsed between the two meetings, the Chairman confessed that formal resolutions had not been prepared.

Informal discussions followed.

Mrs. Hutton, as a non-graduate, asked for information concerning the Alumnae Association—its particular work for the School, and whether it had chapters similar to those in the M.V.S. Society. The President of the Alumnae Association, Miss Foerderer, responded, stating that Miss Cole had instilled new life into the association two or three years ago—that there were no chapters: three yearly meetings, one a Reunion held in May, the Saturday before Commencement. Mrs. Hutton continued: "Why cannot the Council ask the assistance of the Alumnae Association and of the M.V.S. Society through its chapters, in sending abroad the brochures and adding a personal word of explanation looking toward increased registration?"

A motion to this effect, made by Mrs. Hutton and seconded by Miss Slaughter, was carried unanimously.

Mrs. Riley asked whether the Chapters might have Miss Cole with them at special meetings. Miss Cole replied that in her opinion a meeting with prospective patrons is a splendid plan and that she would be happy to travel, when convenient, with this purpose in view.

Miss Slaughter moved that an expression of thanks be given to Seniors, Juniors, the Household Economic division and all who had contributed to the delightful visit of the Council. A special expression of thanks was voted Miss Cole, who in response said she felt that the Council helps greatly to clarify her vision for the school.

The Chairman proposed as the subject for next year's meeting—"The Relation of the School to the Alumnae." Miss Cole promised to compile the questionnaire upon the findings of which the Council may base its discussions. Such findings, she suggested, written up cleverly might have useful publicity if printed in some magazine, Harper's for instance.

Miss Cole announced the beginning of an endowment fund in hand and suggested the opportunity this offered the old girls to remember their Alma Mater in their wills.

Miss Slaughter asked, "What shall we tell our Chapters on our return?" Discussion showed the really important matter to be registration for the coming year as all pressing social problems had been settled.

Miss Cole reverted to the subject of a formal commencement for those who had finished the Fourth Form, and stated that since 1875 Mount Vernon Seminary had in reality been a Junior College—and that she believes the general educational policy in ten years will tend toward combining the last two years of High School with the Freshman and Sophomore years. "We should be going backward should we adopt a second commencement at the end of Fourth Form work."

On the subject of Pressure, she spoke as follows: "If a girl shows the result of pressure, she should drop a proportionate number of hours. It is not the result of required work, but has two causes—procrastination on the part of some—with others, the desire to embrace the entire program."

Mrs. Hutton suggested that tan or brown shoes be required for gymnasium costumes—referred to Dress Committee.

Miss Cole announced the Pension Naumann, Nikolsburgerplatz 6, Wilmersdorf, Berlin—the home of Frau Professor Naumann (formerly a highly esteemed member of our Faculty)—as a delightful place of residence and bespoke its patronage by M.V.S. girls.

Grateful acknowledgment was made of gifts—several useful and valuable books from Mrs. Nye and some fine old English prints from Mrs. Margaret Lipps Hecht.

There being no further business, the Council was declared adjourned.

REPORTS OF SCHOOL INTERESTS

M. V. S. COUNCIL

Cornelia Lewthwaite, President of the Senior Class, opened the session with a brief talk on "The Collegiate Life." "The New Handbook" was discussed as follows by Kate Patton, a member of the Class of 1932:

"Last year, we as the Junior Class, undertook to rewrite the Student's Handbook. We felt that the Collegiates were ready to take the responsibility of more freedom in school life and that the spirit of the school might be presented more attractively to both Forms and Collegiates in a revised handbook. Copies were sent to the new girls before they came to school in September, so that they could be as familiar as possible with school requirements.

"We include the history of some of the customs and traditions such as Founders Day, the Christmas Party, the Chevron Awards. Next came a short explanation of the Co-operative Government and of the Privilege List.

"The class wished to assume greater responsibility and to make this felt among the Collegiates. With this responsibility came privileges. We explained the Collegiate privileges.

"This is a co-operative experiment which we are trying to work out. It has grown through the year but there is still room for assuming responsibility. We realize that in some ways it has failed but in others it has been successful."

Helen Thompson next told the Council about "The Privilege List."

"The Privilege List in its functions is very closely connected with Collegiate life in general. Last year at this time we were making plans for this new system of government. Since then we have had every opportunity to see the actual working of the Privilege List as well as the Committee. In many ways, this new method of student co-operative government has been successful. I think the girls have realized to a great extent the necessity of accepting responsibility and taking it upon themselves to put this thing through. One of our main ideas was to make the girls as happy as possible, not necessarily by extensive outside privileges but by intramural freedom. I am sure if you asked any Collegiate student which system she liked best, the Privilege List or the Marking System, she would answer in favor of the former. This indeed means a great deal to those of us who have been responsible for the putting into effect of this new method of student government.

"The List itself is best defined by the following passage from the Collegiate Handbook: 'There is a Privilege List designed to be within the reach of every Collegiate student. Therefore, we hope that every girl will regard its attainment as her goal.' The List, however, has had a few weaknesses. So far, I think it has been a little too easy for the girls. We hope that in the future its attainment can be made more difficult and that we then may have more actual privileges on the list.

"The privileges for the Seniors are as follows: 'To go to a luncheon and a movie once a month unchaperoned; to go to dinner and the theater once a month chaperoned; to have a dinner permission during the week with friends non-resident in Washington; to visit in other Seniors' rooms during daytime quiet hours.'

"The Junior privileges are: 'To have two luncheon and theater permissions a term (chaperoned); to have an extra shopping permission a month.' There is a slight discrepancy here because the Junior permission on the list runs by the term and a girls' eligibility for it is monthly; this means that she could be off the list for one month but still take full advantage of her privileges the following month. These defects will have to be remedied.

"It was our wish in the early meetings of the Privilege List Committee not to have any special rules to vote girls on or off the List, but since then we have found it necessary to have some by-laws."

Miss Cole interrupted to say: "We tried to have the Privilege List at the beginning very elastic and let circumstances control it, so that it could fit the need of the hour rather than have a pre-conceived notion. In the last Privilege List Committee meeting we discussed the fact that what had really happened was not quite what we had anticipated. In the beginning all the Seniors were put on the Privilege List. We felt that the fact that they were Seniors was sufficient. Any lack of judgment in a girl's Citizenship took her off the Privilege List for the following month. What really it has come to mean is just what we didn't want it to mean. It means that a girl is penalized. The Privilege List should express absolute confidence and trust in a girl's judgment of Citizenship. We wish to make it an award to those not thoughtless and careless, and to avoid their being penalized. There have been very few who have lost the Privilege List. When a girl has lost the Privilege List she herself has asked to be removed.

"There were only five in the Freshman Class on the Dean's List at Smith College, which shows that our proportion is not exactly as it should be. My idea would be that the girls themselves find out how difficult to gain are College Deans' Lists, and if we make ours more difficult, it also ought to mean more responsibility and more privileges. We are going to work on this.

"The eligibility for the Dean's List in college is based upon scholastic standing. We have tried not to do this. The colleges set a definite goal in grades. We have been very fearful that it would in any way discourage a girl who is trying to do her best. Therefore from the scholastic side we are less insistent than we might have been. If a girl did good work for her, she has not been taken from the Privilege List.

"I am pleased to have this criticism come from the Privilege List Committee themselves. They wondered whether perhaps more insistence should not be put on a girl's scholastic attainments."

Miss Thompson told the Council that the Privilege List Committee consisted of the committee chairman, the student body president, three members of the Collegiate Division faculty including the Class Advisers, a Senior elected from the class at large, and two Juniors elected after a period of probation, which meets every report period to revise the Privilege List—making five from the student body and four from the faculty.

Miss Thompson stated that the meetings are not formal. The girls express their opinions and say what they think freely in the Committee Meetings.

Miss Cole said that the Juniors should have a larger quota of privileges than they have had. There is too much difference between Juniors and Seniors. The Junior Class were given their privileges the first of November. Many years it has been at Thanksgiving time, depending on the maturity of the class and quickness of the way in which they settle down into school life.

Margaret Barber then spoke on the "Individualized Method in Mathematics."

"This year Mrs. Lloyd's second year Algebra class, five in number, is working in a slightly different way from that to which we are accustomed. At the beginning of the year we were given a syllabus with the work to be covered during the year. With this as a guide each of us works at her own speed, making sure that she masters new processes and methods as she meets them.

"The syllabus is divided into blocks of work. At the end of each block we take a test to see whether we have understood all that has gone before and if necessary we are asked to repeat it. We are able to cover more work in this way because we work in class time as well as out and do not waste time listening to explanations given for one student which we do not need. Obviously we do not all find the same parts of the work difficult or vice versa. The students who are ahead are able to do work marked as optional in the syllabus that they would not be able to tackle otherwise. The class is small enough to enable Mrs. Lloyd to see the work of each member every day and give us help when we need it.

"We really enjoy going on ahead and seeing how much we can get done every day. There is a great satisfaction in working out the methods for ourselves from the explanation in the book. It makes us feel more independent of one another and of Mrs. Lloyd. I really feel that I understand more thoroughly since I have had to puzzle things out for myself.

"Of course, occasionally we meet topics so different and so difficult that they must be explained to the class as a whole and our individual work must be interrupted to make that possible. But we are relieved when we can return to our own way of working."

Some members have gone on straight through the syllabus and others have skipped a part in order to study with the group that part of the syllabus which must be studied together. There was sometimes a chapter's difference in the attainment.

Betty Uhl then read the following paper on "The Survey of Civilization" course:

"This Course was presented to you last year as given to the Collegiate Division over a two-year period. I, as a member of the Senior Class, have only a few weeks more before this unit is completed.

"The object of the course is to cover as extensively, but with as much thought as time will permit, a survey of the history of civilization from neolithic man, through ancient civilization, the grandeur of the Classical period, the glory and lavishness of Rome, the Middle Ages, down to modern times, speaking at the same time of the principal personages of the various cycles; also considering the type of government, legislative measures, and standards of living prevalent during the times. We have attempted to analyze society, taking examples of the fundamentals of primitive life, tracing them down through the ages, showing their changes, their culmination in the splendor of Rome, their breakdown in the Middle Ages, and final present-day climax into Imperialism. It is with the changes of the fundamental principles with which we are most interested. At the end of the first year, we had reached the Industrial Revolution, from which point we started this year's work, considering the cause of its rise, its far-reaching effect in relation to the various countries of the world. Studying a few of the numerous contributions of the well-known inventors and their influence upon present-day life, we arrived at the French and the American Revolutions, discussing fully their cause and effects, war measures, difficulties of the first congress, and problems of the day.

"A few weeks ago we finished the Civil War Period, looking at it politically, economically and socially, and delving into its accomplishments and failures. We regarded every aspect of its economic expansion, the influence and the rivalries that this economic move produced and its cultural effects on backward countries.

"At the present time we are attempting to straighten out Imperialism, as the disruption of World Unity, the source of the breakdown of international relationships of the world, and the cause of the World War (our ultimate objective for the next two weeks). We expect to finish up the year in discussing a few modern problems.

"It is a lecture course, meeting for two hours twice a week, Mr. Lloyd giving the talks, and leaving us to take notes or merely listen as we may see fit. A variety of books is assigned which are correlative with the subject, and facilitate its better understanding.

"Occasionally we have class questions and discussions and at other times, after a block of work is completed, a thought-provoking question, about which we are free to exercise our own opinions. A test is given about once every five weeks, which may be either purely factual or thought-stimulating.

"Long papers are assigned two or three times a term on various aspects of the question then being studied. These may be either worked out individually or in groups of twos and threes; at their completion certain ones are presented before the class and discussed. A group of papers is now being prepared on 'Russia's Five-Year Plan,' 'Fascism in Italy,' 'Peace Movements,' 'British Empire,' 'Imperialism in the East,' and 'America Since the War.'

"No one is expected to read all the books assigned for outside work. Each student is responsible to herself, for just what she alone wants to get out of it, whether it be great or small, but according to her own personal desires.

"For Junior College students, a knowledge of History is particularly essential and for the prospective college graduate almost a necessity, as at least one year of history is usually required in colleges and universities as a prerequisite for advanced college work.

"If one is particularly interested in History, and intends to continue in college work, a clearer idea of just what branch to specialize in may be gained early, since a brief survey of the entire field has already been made.

"It is a most informative course, giving us a consciousness of the actual development of the history of civilization, making us feel that we have a part to perform, however small it may be, and enabling us to approach modern problems in a logical, open-minded way, unhampered by biased opinions, all of which is most essential if we are to take our places as citizens in the world in which we live."

Lucile Donaldson followed Miss Uhl with a talk on the World Literature course. She read a paper which had been written some time ago in the World Literature course, as follows: "A Critique of Orientation Courses."

"Education has become fashionable. Colleges and universities are no longer for those who seek knowledge alone but for all who can afford to attend them and some who cannot. This fact makes the traditional curriculum, so long accepted without question, very questionable indeed. The original purpose of academic instruction was to give those who wished to master the truth some foundation upon which to build their thoughts. But why could it not furnish bases of evaluation for those who would go into other occupations after commencement?

"A new principle, usefulness, is now guiding educators. This does not mean that benefits from instruction are intended to be merely vocational and financial, but aesthetic, social, moral, and intellectual as well. Subjects for study have to be adapted to new needs. The orientation course has been created as part of the plan to meet modern requirements of schooling.

"A course like our World Literature is a survey of related divisions of knowledge designed to be substituted for detailed introductions in separate fields. That the experiment has been successful in giving us a general background into which we may fit the experiences of life, may be admitted, just as the now discarded hickory-stick did induce certain small boys to learn their multiplication tables in bygone days. But it must be observed, too, that some students emerge from the year's study, like many grammar school pupils from a switching, too dazed for worth-while future thinking. Will this kind of learning be "useful"? The question is one which each of us must answer for herself. And the solution to the problem will come, perhaps, when we analyze the reason why we should be concerned with the matter at all.

"More than we realize, our thoughts are influenced by the theory of relativity. Knowledge, we have seen, is only significant as it is connected with life. Just so its various branches are important as they are important to one another. The greatest thinker today is he who can discern most clearly the true value of that which he meets, taking into consideration all which has made it what it is. Such a person must look upon the past and the present drawn in their true perspectives. Such perspectives an orientation course gives. It moulds learning into the vast complicated framework of a stained-glass window. The structure, if properly built, has symmetry and grace, but it is only an empty leaden network. A survey course like our World Literature treats the subject so generally that it cannot deal with some of the definite, interesting phases which former courses in literature have stressed. The novel, for instance, is studied, but there is no time to stop for the reading of a dozen novels. The same holds true for the drama. One or two Shakespearean plays suffice instead of the old-fashioned Shakespeare course. Still, as the student finds details for himself he may fit them as bits of pane into the holes of corresponding size in the framework. He sees the relation of each piece to all the others and to the whole, instead of looking through them separately, as he would have done had there been nothing to hold them together.

"The orientation course does help the twentieth-century mind to understand the trend of the times. When we have completed a survey of literature, we have gained some idea of the great extent of a particular field. New possibilities for detailed study are open to us, and cherished fragments of learning have assumed proper order of importance. We have a background into which we can place the definite knowledge of the future, and because we can observe facts impartially, we will have more accurate bases for evaluation and criticism.

"But what of the person who does not intend to spend more than a year, for instance, in obtaining information on one subject? She, too, would have at the end of a survey course, a background, but no hope of ever filling it in. She would see new possibilities for study, but would not care to follow them. She would know the extent of the field, but not what lay inside that extent. She might be able to give a true value for that which she judged if only she had something on which to base judgment. She would have the leaden pattern for a window, but no glass to put in it. Would it be more useful for her to know well part of a large subject; so that at least she might have some foundation for thought?

"It is in the capacity of a finishing school subject that the orientation course is best known. Perhaps it was first created to give a polished surface to education for those who did not wish to dig deeply. I suppose it does serve such a purpose rather well, enabling the student to appear to know something whether she does or not. But it seems to me that so long as we continue to think of it as a finishing process we shall fail to see that its true worth lies in its ability to build a background for further study in separate fields. Let the orientation course be for those who are willing to consider it as a beginning rather than an end."

Katherine Cable next presented a paper on the course—"An Introduction to Modern Scientific Problems."

"When the Survey of Science course was presented last year to the Collegiate Division and the Fourth Form—the future Juniors—I decided in a very short time that I wanted to take it. If it was that first year to be more or less in the nature of an experiment, it sounded a rather thrilling one when the four members of its faculty told us about it. I had previously had almost no science and while I did not care enough about it to take any more specialized course, I did, however, feel the need for a little knowledge of science as a whole. This new course seemed to offer an opportunity for acquiring some understanding of the subject of the various sciences, and I expected to arrive at the end of the year with a broadened idea of the function of science in the world and the ability to understand at least what people meant when they talked about electrostatics and Darwin's theory.

"Now as I look back to my original expectations in taking the Survey of Science course, it is evident that they differ in several respects from what I really have obtained from it. My expectations have, of course, been realized, but merely becoming acquainted with a few facts is only secondary to the consciousness it has given me of doors opened to areas which before had been only guessed. During this year the unity of the universe has for the first time been thoroughly shown to me. This course has pointed out clearly and straightforwardly that no one science may exist independent of the others, and that they all are woven inextricably together into the processes of life.

"Mr. Lloyd gave us the first hint of this in his introduction to the scientific method, but it was left to the consecutive presentations of the other subjects to prove it to us. Mrs. Lloyd's Astronomy and Mr. Lloyd's Geology helped us form some conception of the vastness and complexity of the Universe, in which our earth is only one fascinating fragment. Then Miss Elting with her Chemistry and Mrs. Lloyd again, giving an outline of Physics, showed us the materials of which it is made and the laws that rule its activities. Following that Miss Elting introduced us to Biology, leading up to it with Colloid Chemistry. At present, Miss Walker has taken us in hand and we are delving into the secrets of the mind in an effort to know something about Psychology. We will round out the course with a study of the problems of Sociology under Mr. Lloyd. At first thought it might seem only a confusing element to have one course taught by four different people, but I have found it to be rather a source of added interest. No two methods of presentation are in the least alike, and the variety of viewpoints which exists among these four is proving a much greater stimulus toward breadth of thought than one teacher alone could offer.

"The Survey of Science course does not require any one of an especially scientific turn of mind to enjoy and profit by it. On the contrary, it would not be very useful to one who was well acquainted with Science, for it is distinctly a layman's course. As its name indicates, it attempts to give no more than a survey of scientific methods and discoveries. It also offers an opportunity both for the student of practical mind to seize upon some concrete data and for the student of theoretical mind to let her imagination wander as far as she likes. Which class a student belongs to will determine which of the subjects presented she will most enjoy, for they give chance for a wide variety of interests. If one student finds more appeal in the stars in their courses and another is more interested in the mental processes of man, nevertheless, when the end of every subject is reached each one finds that it has contributed just so much more to her general conception of nature. I find myself now thankful, not for having been taught a little more about a field hitherto completely strange to me, but rather intensely grateful for the enlarged capacity to think with a fuller understanding of 'what it's all about.'

"The greatest value of any course of this kind lies in the impression it has made on the student's minds and in how well it has succeeded in rousing interests which may have hitherto been latent. The Survey of Science course has provided a stimulus for exciting responses toward more than one natural inclination, and the fact that there are those of us who plan to carry on in some branch of the subject that has interested us proves that it has indeed justified itself."

Louise Raynor next presented "A Mount Holyoke College Junior in Perspective":

"Last year as I became interested in my first-year college work, I began to realize that I would like to continue through Senior college. The courses which I then took were much more congenial to me than those I had taken in high school as they offered a wider choice of subjects and allowed greater freedom in study methods. When I returned to Mount Vernon Seminary this fall, I began to make inquiries into the possibility of transfer to a Senior college. The college which I am most anxious to enter is Mount Holyoke. I chose Mount Holyoke because one of its alumnae quite unconsciously aroused my interest in her Alma Mater by telling me of her experiences there as a student. As you all know, Mrs. Hensley and Miss Cole are graduates of this college, besides two or three members of our faculty, so this, too, led me to prefer Mount Holyoke to all other colleges.

"Mount Holyoke had never before been asked to consider the possibility of accepting with advanced standing a graduate from our Junior college, but the board of admission at the college has been very willing to consider applicants who are recommended by Mount Vernon Seminary.

"Mount Holyoke is broad-minded in its requirements for transfer—admission will be based upon the standing of the Junior College, the recommendation of this school, and the quality of the applicant's academic record in both high school and junior college. Entrance examinations will not be required on either my high school or junior college work, but the final standing of a transfer student is not determined until the middle of the year.

"Miss Ballou has attended to the preliminary formalities and has sent a transcript of my record. Syllabi of the courses have been forwarded for evaluation by the heads of the different departments. In return I have been sent innumerable blanks for health records and other data, along with a most interesting catalogue and view book. These have made me even more eager to go to Mount Holyoke. With me will go Kitty Cable, my roommate last year and this, and we hope that we may convince Mount Holyoke for all time that Mount Vernon Seminary girls belong in the New England women's colleges."

Miss Cole said: "I think perhaps you know that for many years we have had girls accepted in the universities of the country with full Junior standing. The proudest feather in our cap is Leland-Stanford, which has accepted two of our girls with full Junior standing. Another girl is taking her degree in June at Chicago University after two years' work. We haven't sent a student there for eighteen years. Marianne Stevenson went with a very high record from the school. Chicago University reduces all work to 'C.' She is, therefore, not eligible for Phi Beta Kappa, but she has been permitted to go into the honors course and is doing 'A' grade work for the most part. Up to this time the women's colleges have not exhibited any great interest in the junior college graduate.

We are hoping, however, to send one girl to Wellesley next fall on the same consideration as these two girls are going to Mount Holyoke."

Barbara Sincerbeaux next told the Council about "The Library Committee":

"Perhaps you have noticed that our library and study hall is never proctored during the morning study hours. Last year this system was adopted through the organization of a library committee responsible for insuring ideal conditions there.

"This committee is made up of the president of either the Yellow or White classes, each serving a semester in turn as chairman, and a representative from each class in the school appointed by the chairman who is a member. With Miss Hastings as their adviser the committee last year drew up a set of rules and regulations which were forcefully brought to bear upon the student body through careful explanation. When their instructions were forgotten or disregarded the students were prompted by members of the committee. We feel that this system which is without proctors or marks is contributing to the growth of self-discipline and self-control on the part of the student body. Here each individual has the opportunity to assume her responsibilities toward the whole. Nevertheless, during afternoon and evening study hour, where some few are required to come each month, a member of the committee serves as proctor.

"With the splendid foundation made last year this year's committee was confronted with reasonably few problems. Revisions were made in the wording of several rules which we felt were important for maintaining order among the present group of students. At the respective class meetings each representative from the committee presented the new rules as well as emphasized the old ones, and the student body responded enthusiastically. The library committee meets as it did last year whenever the chairman feels that the work should be discussed or that new measures should be taken in fulfilling our aim."

Mrs. Riley said: "Lest we think that it is all brains here at Mount Vernon Seminary, Helen Ray Potter is going to tell us about the Athletics."

Helen Ray spoke as follows:

"I do wish there were some way in which the Council might see the Athletic Association in full action, for from what I have gathered, our activities have increased immensely since, say 1900, and have even changed in numerous ways in the last two or three years. However, I am afraid we might find it rather difficult to show you, in such a short time, for our activities continue throughout the whole year.

"First of all I think I should explain to you that Miss Spaulding and Miss Pearson are at the Head of the Department of Physical Education; and are Honorary Members of the Association, and at the same time are the most helpful advisers. The Department of Physical Education sponsors the activities of the Athletic Association.

"The Association is made up of the entire student body. The Board consists of the President, Vice-President, Secretary-Treasurer, Chairman of the Outing Club, and a manager for each sport, elected by the executive board, and captains of the Yellow and White teams elected by the student body.

"The board this year has been trying to further develop the spirit and interest in athletics. We have sponsored all kinds of tournaments, golf, tennis and squash; we have had numerous basket-ball games, one outside game with the Madeira School, in which M.V.S. was most successful. We have had our swimming meet and then our one large affair of the season took place last week—our Athletic Association banquet and dance. This spring we are planning some tennis matches with the Friends School and the Outing Club will again sponsor Sunday morning walks and breakfasts, evening walks, nights at the Shelter, and on Wednesdays and Saturdays we hope to have long horseback rides with luncheons and suppers. We are also again planning our horse show to be held in May on our hockey field.

"The only big change in the Association this year is that we have divided the school into just two teams—the Yellow and the White, developing a sister class spirit. First and Third Forms, plus the Junior Class make up the White team; and Second and Fourth Forms plus the Seniors making up the Yellow team. This allows us to have first, second and third teams in many sports, thus giving a greater opportunity to a larger number of girls to play on their own teams.

"The results of all games and tournaments go toward the award of the atheletic banner, at the end of each sport season, to the team winning the greatest number of points.

"I do hope I have made the Association and its activities clear to you, and would love to explain anything I possibly can."

Miss Cole said that Play Day was one of the very nicest things we do. On that day several of the schools—Friends, Madeira, Holton Arms—come to M.V.S. The whole school is divided up into two teams—just for pleasure, not for competition. "One of the reasons why we have been most happy in the present instructors is the fact that they have introduced in an amazing measure the love of sport. There has been less of the spirit of competition between classes. The girls really have expressed a joy in the athletic work. Play Day has really attracted a good deal of attention. Other schools have inquired about it."

Betty Field next gave the Council an account of the first prom held recently at M.V.S.

"This year we had our first prom at M.V.S. For many weeks the faculty mapped out a program of events for us and then submitted them to a committee made up of girls and faculty. This committee decided details and presented to the student body various plans from which to choose. The date for the prom was set for February 27. In the afternoon the Yellow and White classes gave a charming production of the 'Adventures of Lady Ursula,' which was followed by a tea dance in the Field House. The guests left at six but returned at eight for the big dance in the evening. It was held in the dining room, while Great Hall was used as a reception room. The Mayflower orchestra furnished the music, and there was good form in dancing evidenced everywhere. It was a program affair and worked out very well. At ten-thirty we were served refreshments, and at twelve the guests departed.

"Anybody coming into school over this week-end, I am sure, would not have recognized M.V.S., for the library was converted into a cloak room and Room A into a very attractive smoking and sitting room for the men. We refrained from making it too comfortable for fear that our guests would be tempted to pass the evening there!

"On Sunday about forty of the boys returned for morning chapel, and Sunday dinner with us, but at three o'clock the last guest had departed.

"In spite of the fact that Yale was having its Junior prom and that several schools near Washington were having dances, we had over 100 guests. Every one feels that the week-end was a big success, and hopes that it will become an annual affair. If it does, we hope that every dance will be as much fun for all and go off as well as this, our first."

Miss Cole said: "We had no criticism whatever to make—a delightful affair. The girls managed it with suggestions from us, but largely themselves. We went through the evening without anything about which we could be the least unhappy."

A Miracle Play, written by Lucile Donaldson, was read extremely well by Miss Marion Duval; also, a group of poems, written by some of our students, in Miss De Lano's class, was read by Miss Mary Hurd.

Mrs. Riley expressed her gratitude to the girls for bringing so much of the school to the Council. She felt it had been a very interesting and revealing morning. She said she felt very humble at pretending to be of help to a school which is doing so much.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE M. V. S. COUNCIL

Busy years are apt to make one lose the surface touch with M.V.S., but in the depths is always a current of strong interest in the life of the school and its associated activities. This truth was emphasized in my case when the invitation to become a member of the Council was accepted, and I found myself one of many who had not met since the day of graduation, or at most had to be content with a passing glimpse or hasty greeting. Now all was different. We were to be together for several days; there was time in which to remember and resume fragmentary conversations; much to interest in picking up threads so completely lost sight of, and a host of pleasant happenings to be remembered in the days to come.

So much for the general feeling about the meeting with the old girls—but another, and most interesting one to me, was the introduction to the life of the new school. My knowledge of that was a most cursory one, as the usual free time for me was during the holidays, when I could see my friends, or at least many of them, but had little chance to meet those who were carrying on the school with such success. The fact that I knew the old school from the double standpoint of pupil and of the faculty made the Council meeting particularly interesting to me—the girls and their reactions, their instructors and their results, the new methods and the memory of the old, the age-old combinations still holding together under the new conditions, all interested me much.

I thought I had a keen interest in all the M.V.S. affairs, but this experience with the Council meetings shows me that actual contact is always the secret of a vivid and helpful interest in everything, even one so dear as that of M.V.S. to the heart of all the Old Girls—no matter how old.

PHILA CALDER NYE.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS FROM AN ALUMNA

As a result of letters received by Miss Walker in her capacity as Treasurer of the M.V.S. Society, I wrote asking Mildred Joy Robertson '15, to enlarge upon an expression in her letter in which she said that she was developing an interest that would absorb her "when the children had left the nest." I also wrote to Mattilene Mayer Truby '12, who described her work as lecturing on the current novel and drama in her home town, asking her to send us one of her reviews.* I need not mention the glow of pride I feel in these, as well as many others among our graduates.

PREPARATION FOR THE TIME WHEN THE CHILDREN HAVE LEFT THE NEST

When recently I used the words which form the subject of this brief monograph, I was requested to amplify a bit. To do so, is indeed, a pleasant undertaking, because that of which I write will prove to be, I hope, the groundwork of much happiness to be built upon during the years to come, when present duties shall have lessened.

Last week I was interested in the efforts of some robins, which were building a nest in the grape arbor, and as I watched the activities of those small creatures, a comparison of their life to my own came to mind.

Mother and father robin will make something of a success in rearing a family. Mother, devoted and untiring in her efforts as she may appear to be, may find it necessary to solve the housing problem by a gentle, though effective push to remove one or more of her offsprings from the nest, in order to make it comfortably roomy for those who remain therein. And in spite of all the seemingly patient hours she has brooded over them, carefully training them to meet the needs of an independent living, she has been counting the days, so to speak, when she and her mate can leave to build another home before the season is too far advanced, and rear more fledglings.

When our small brood (a boy and a girl) has reached the time when custom, urge and experience, all make departure from the parental roof seem desirable, we, the father and mother, do not intend to build a new nest for the express purpose of rearing a new family.

Thus, a problem, peculiar to the human race, presents itself, when one may feel that there should be another motive in life besides attending to the usual everyday matters, common to all of us.

Happily, there remain several years to be spent in preparation for maturity. Do not think I am not regarding them as quite the most precious of all the years we may have together. I am not yet ready to step out of the picture. No indeed!

For the truth, unkind as it may seem to be at times, is apparently this—that parents are very useful as background. And background is not to be ignored in a picture—it helps very much in the general effect. Think that over the next time you may feel that Jimmie or Alice seem to be trying to put you in your place, probably in a strictly frank, up-to-date manner, and you begin to wonder just what you do know about children and your relation to them.

A very clever observer, and one who understands parents and children, has likened parents to a railroad terminal during a period of complete remodeling. He states, quite truthfully, that such a terminal could not be successfully closed temporarily and reopened when the changes have been made. It must continue to function while undergoing alterations, until such time when it may emerge quite a different structure, more beautiful, more efficient in service, yet remaining unmoved.

If we catch the significance of this comparison, we shall see the splendid application; for underlying it is the thought that parents may or should undergo changes in attitude with the growth of their children. They should be able to keep up with the new pace in mental and moral development in order that they may stand with the next generation on the new levels of comprehension.

What better than to have enlarged one's capacity for understanding through the pursuit of an absorbingly interesting hobby, particularly one which requires considerable contact with other people and ideas?

A mother, who usually holds a greater responsibility in the rearing of children, naturally feels the loss more than does the father, when that responsibility shall have so largely lessened.

Now supposing that one has arrived at the time when she must turn to something other than child training as one of life's principal occupations, and assuming that there are to be many hours which may be filled with activity away from the home. A well-balanced life ought to be useful in several directions, and one is fortunate who can find the useful to be also congenial.

Two years ago I was given an opportunity to do considerable whittling, figuratively speaking. To tell of the occasion would require unnecessary detail, but I might add that, although at that time I was led to wonder what most of life is all about—just what it meant to me, as well as what I might mean to it—I emerged from the experience (illness) obsessed with the idea that I must make a go of life, and somehow make it go bigger than ever before.

So far I had dabbled in several activities, more or less interesting. But none seemed to be outstanding. A splendid opening was offered not long afterward to get into something which, after consideration, appeared to be that Great Motive for which I had been waiting, but not seeking, I assure you. This was Conservation. The opening came in Federated Club work, as a district chairman, which office, though not one of so very great importance, seemed to give me almost a running start.

On the small bit I have been able to do thus far in this absorbing work, I shall not dwell. Suffice it to say that I have been increasingly happy and busy, in so far as duties of home will allow an interest which should require much time and thought away from that home.

And I do feel that at last I have found that something which will grow as the children grow, but which will continue in growth after the "time when the children will have left the nest."

For the present I must be content to do the little which may be accomplished within a short radius of operation, but there is plenty of time for enlargement. Life in a normal family is absorbing in itself. It is, indeed, a great performance, and why should one wish to miss any of it?

The childhood theme is but one of many, yet important to the development of the whole. Therefore I realize that I must give the actors in that portion of the play full opportunity to make the most of their roles. Then follows the part of the drama for which preparation should have been made at an earlier time for smoothness of continuity.

What shall a mother do then—turn from this to that in an effort to find something suitable to her ability and liking?

It will have been much more delightful to have been working gradually into the new field, sharing its novelty with the children while they have been growing with it. Their appreciation, if merited, will prove to be one of the most satisfactory dividends. Discovery of what the field is to be may have required considerable research. It need not necessarily be technical, nor a serious hobby, but it should be pursued seriously for best results.

As I see it now, this outside work is a source of interest to the children also. It is in no way competitive with any other activity in the family—therefore I have the field to myself. And what a field? Hugh and Carol (I suspect their dad, as well) seem to be genuinely interested in the various features of activity of a conservator, and they realize that what I am trying to help to do is to save for their future enjoyment some of the natural beauties and resources which add so much to the richness of the Good Life. Thus, the common denominator in life is greater, we are better able to understand one another, life has no chance to become stale, and there continues to be romance in living.

Not long ago a friend who is expanding into a larger life of her own (her hobby is American pottery)—although her family is first and foremost always, and happily so, showed me a telegram just received from her youngest son, in which he offered genuine congratulations upon a very successful occasion. Her attitude in the receipt of the message was one of pride, yet the gesture in showing it was not boastful.

The effect upon myself was to arouse within me a hope that some day I, too, might deserve such affectionate co-operation from my children. For it proved that a mother, even with outside interests of her own could still be, above all else, a successful mother.

And what more should any mother wish to be?

MILDRED JOY ROBERTSON.

PERSONALS

Miss Cole has been invited by the Board of the Y.W.C.A. to be a member of the Committee of the Elizabeth Somers' Residence, filling the vacancy left by the death of Elsie Edwards.

Miss Cole spent the month of July at the sanitarium in Watkins' Glen, obtaining a much-needed rest.

Miss Katharine Hill went first to her home in Steubenville, Ohio, and then to Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd spent the summer in Cardiff, Wales.

Miss Walker went first to relatives in Baltimore and later to Lookout Mountain to be with Helen Doughty and those blessed children. Miss Walker's sister, Mrs. Fanny Yeatman, the mother of Helen, has accomplished something interesting. As a specialist in Food Utilization in the Department of Agriculture, she has, with Ruth Van Deman as Editor, been responsible for a cook book which has been printed in many thousands by the Department and recently been put into Braille, the first cook book for the blind ever published in this country. It is the only thing of its kind on the continent. The following letters speak for themselves, as to its usefulness:

From Shenandoah, Iowa:

"It is just what I have needed ever since I took over the culinary department of our home. It is hard for my family to realize that it is the first cook book I, a blind woman, ever had, though the house has had many. Until this book came it has really been to me, the cook, like 'water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink'."

From the Junior League Bulletin, Detroit:

"Heretofore no amount of money could buy such a gift as you have made possible for us. I thank the Junior League members from the bottom of my heart for 'Aunt Sammy's Radio Recipes in Braille.' The book is wonderfully written and will be a great help to me, as I have to cook for a restaurant this summer."

Miss Ames and Miss Morgan spent the summer at St. Hilda's Hall, Charles Town, W.Va.

Miss Mildred Hanna went home to Auburn, Nebraska, and reported very hot weather.

Miss Grace Carroll summered in Carlsbad, Germany.

Miss Frances Herriott was abroad in June but returned in July to accept the management of the stage at the Casino Theater at Newport, R.I.

Miss Corinne Leino made her first trip abroad, settling down at Newnham College, Cambridge, for study.

Miss Miriam L. Spaulding traveled through England on a bicycle.

Miss Louise Martin, the school nurse, spent the summer at her cottage in Clifton, Canada.

Mrs. McAllister was with her niece in Huntingdon Valley, Pa.

Miss Agnes De Lano spent the summer in Europe accompanied by Lucille Donaldson '32.

Mrs. Rickett was at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Miss Blakeslee spent her vacation in New England.

Mme. Moulé visited friends at Capal'aigle, Quebec.

Mme. Peltier spent the summer in France.

Miss Pearson was at her home in New Jersey.

Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Payne were at Cape May.

Miss Hillyer and her sister, Mrs. Gibbs, took an Art Course at Columbia University, N.Y.

Miss Norse was at her little cottage beyond Great Falls on the Potomac.

Miss Helen Myers and her mother took a motor trip to Toronto, Canada, stopping at several delightful places en route.

Miss Brouse was with the Kaspars at Bluemont, W.Va.

Miss Mary R. Brown was at Marblehead with her mother and sister.

Miss Hastings was in Brookline with her sister.

Miss Holdren spent the summer at Marietta, Ohio, with her mother.

Mrs. Rice and her two children were at Cape Cod.

Miss Tremain taught at the Daily Vacation Bible School, conducted for the children of the Bonus Army in Anacostia, D.C., during July. One appreciative father came to the school and said: "I thank you for what you done for my kids."

Thus endeth the Faculty Vacation List as far as known!

Grace Willis '87 spent the month of August at Eagles Mere with a niece.

Marie Stewart Labat '09 and her son were with her parents at Ocean City, Md.

Marguerite Weller Hynson '08 was also at Ocean City, Md.

Mabel Walker Carter '94 spent part of August at Eagles Mere, Pa.

Fanny Rowan Young '04 has returned from England and is living in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Spence-Thomas (Mary Fleming '20) were visitors in the United States the past year.

Harriet Snider '25 made a visit of a few days at M.V.S. in the spring.

Alice Stone Farmer '04 finds that life insurance offers more possibilities than the book business.

Mary Reed Simpson '29 spent six months in Europe recently.

Harriet Gillette Kleitz '14 was a visitor at the school in May.

Dorothy Schmidt '21 is president of the Chicago Junior League and especially interested in their drama and play work.

Mildred Joy Robertson '15 was appointed by the Governor of Iowa as a delegate to the State Park Association Conference meeting in Virginia last spring.

The Heckert twins, Frances and Margaret '25, are interested in the Children's Theater in Pittsburgh. They are also workers for the soup kitchen, under the auspices of the M.V.S. Chapter in their city.

Rowena Thom Rathbone '28 is one of the directors of the Los Angeles Junior League and is a member of the Executive Board of the Woman's Committee of the Philharmonic Orchestra. Dr. Rathbone is a Yale man and a graduate of the Medical Department at Stanford.

Katharine Meyers of the M.V.S. Society, who was at school last year, made a drawing of the Elizabeth Somers Memorial Window, which is reproduced in this issue of the Annual.

The M.V.S. doorway was drawn by Elsie Edwards for the first reunion in the new building and was used that year on the place cards at the luncheon.

Grace Janney '00 spent her vacation at Rachel Coffin's "Camp Innisfree," near West Springfield, New Hampshire.

Nannie Skillman '88 also spent the summer there, having sold "The Croyden Inn," which she has carried on so successfully since the war.

Nellie Clephane '88 has spent the summer recovering from an operation which she underwent soon after the reunion.

Addie Clark '88, with her husband and daughter, spent the summer months in the Scandinavian Peninsula.

IN MEMORIAM

FLORENCE C. MILLER '96. Died February 27th, 1932

Another link has been broken in the chain that bound the Class of 1896 to one another and to its beloved Alma Mater. Florence C. Miller passed away on February 27th after a long and serious illness.

Mt. Vernon Seminary has lost a loyal Alumna, the members of the class a devoted friend, and Edith Miller Greenlee a loving sister. To her and her loved ones we extend our sincerest sympathy.

M. MARSH REES,
For the Class of 1896.

MARIE E. MITCHELL (Mrs. James B. Barry) '10
Died September 26th, 1931

One of her classmates writes of her: "Marie had lived in Irvington-on-Hudson only about six years, but she had won a real place for herself. She was generally popular and deeply loved by a large group of friends. Her death is a genuine loss to the whole community." She is survived by her husband and two daughters.

ALICE E. EDWARDS '93. Died April 8th, 1932

Talented in so many ways, she used those talents for the benefit and pleasure of her many friends, especially in connection with the school plays.

Self-effacing—but always ready to help in any way that she could. The following lines seem to express the life she lived so quietly among us.

"She doeth little kindnesses
Which most leave undone or despise,
For naught that sets one heart at ease,
Or bringeth happiness and peace
Is low esteemed in her eyes."

Forty-fifth Annual Report

O F T H E

Alumnae Association of Mount Vernon Seminary

WASHINGTON, D. C.

1933

THIS final Annual is sent to all Alumnae who in forty-five years have shown an interest, however fleeting in their Alma Mater—with the hope of re-arousing that interest and renewing their loyalty and enthusiasm.

On November fifth, 1933, the Alumnae Association and the M.V.S. Society will meet together to elect officers and adopt a constitution for the New Alumnae Association.

If it is possible, be present at that meeting and share in giving to Founders' Day another and added significance.

FOREWORD

THIS is the last issue of the Annual. It is glorious in its death for, Phoenix-like, there shall arise from its ashes—fairer promise, greater harmony, broader vision.

The Editors of the Past beseech from the Fates a boon for the Editors of the Future. May they be skillful and tactful, witty and wise; may there be ever abundance of material and at hand ready for the assembling thereof, a corps of assistants eager, able and devoted.

HAIL AND FAREWELL!

HOW reassuring it is to recognize the law of evolution at work in the spiritual world about us as well as in the physical. The history of our school has been one unbroken evolution as like the Chambered Nautilus it has periodically "cast its outgrown shell" and come forth in a physical form adequate to its ever-enlarging sphere of activity. It would be strange indeed if the organizations of its old girls should not likewise require "more stately mansions." The little group of graduates that gathered in 1888 to form the Alumnae Association of Mount Vernon Seminary met with fine vision the need of the immediate future as did those old girls who in 1912 formed the M.V.S. Society to insure a point of contact for the large number of "old girls" who, with no less loyalty and devotion, desired to be bound to their Alma Mater likewise for the twofold purpose of keeping alive the school associations and of rendering such service to the school as might be possible.

Now forty-five years later with unselfishness of purpose and kindled afresh by the desire to serve, yet regardful of the natural and jealously guarded distinction of holding the M.V.S. diploma, the Alumnae Association at its meeting May 27, 1933, unanimously voted to extend its membership to include all former M.V.S. students. The M.V.S. Society at its May meeting voted to accept the implied invitation to merge its identity with the Alumnae Association should this invitation be given. Accordingly a committee from each group was appointed to arrange details for the actual merger on Founders' Day in the Fall.

In taking this step our "old girls"—now "alumnae"—are falling in line with the procedure of men's and women's colleges everywhere. After all, the purpose of such organizations is to serve the Alma Mater in the fullest measure possible. It was recognition of this purpose and the desire to provide the means by which graduate and non-graduate alike might find the freest expression of her power to serve that prompted the merger. The strength of union is indubitable and since the purpose of the two organizations is one, only loss can accrue from the maintenance of separate organizations.

By means of the merger, our alumnae (now used in the broader sense) literally emerge into a new body adequate to meet the need of the present and, as far as it is permitted to vision, the future.

JEAN DEAN COLE.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Mrs. Somers

Seer of visions, maker of dreams-come-true, teacher incomparable, lover of beauty, of wit, of life!

Through my mother, whose affection for Mrs. Somers could not be measured by words, there came to me a deep and abiding love for her and for M.V.S. long before I entered the school. "The Annals of 1911," the year book of my class, is dedicated to Mrs. Somers with these words, which words express in part my love and gratitude as I "look backward."

"More is thy due than
More than all can pay."

ELIZABETH SWARTZELL DAVIS.

To appraise aright one so dynamic as Elizabeth Jane Eddy Somers, it is necessary to know something of a parsonage in the Middle West almost a century ago; for her father was a pioneer Methodist preacher, who for righteousness' sake had foregone the emoluments of tempting advancements, to foster spiritually a few widely scattered, struggling parishes in the early days of Indiana. He rode on horseback through the high prairie grass; a man of vision and ripe culture who gave to his gifted family little money, but the richer heritage of sound bodies, brilliant minds, the precious gift of humor and the sharing with him of the glory and the high adventure of his heroic call. The elemental life touched reality at every point as actually as the air, the sunshine and the wide horizons satisfied them physically. There was no artifice, hence from the very necessity of struggle, Mrs. Somers, like her able brothers and sister, was individual in a very real way, deeply rooted in the fundamental things of life. Her tremendous personality was marked by perfect sincerity and naturalness; a blend of seriousness and wit, of high learning and an almost uncanny diagnosis of character, of a too generous heart, and an analytical mind gave her a richness of individuality that makes her outstanding and creative.

It is for that reason, I think, that even the wittiest of the many brilliant things she said and did, fall short, in the telling when we try to recapture them.

Everything she said had a bit of the woof and warp of her charming many-sided self. Those of us fortunate enough to be called by her her "daughters," still feel the dynamic influence in our lives and our thinking: the heavenly vision of sacrifice and high adventure that made her such a factor to her girls. Who can ever forget the quiet Sunday nights in her room when, sitting on the floor, we came "to grips" with something so compelling and worthwhile spiritually, that all life henceforth seemed different. Long before so-called "self-expression" was current, Mrs. Somers was its champion, not in easy drifting but by difficult climbing yet splendid mastery. What self-expression is finer than "He conquers all who conquers self," and what is more challenging to a formative girl than an Order of Chivalry where she may dream of a character that is not an achievement but an aspiration!

Our Alma Mater is founded on ideals, and as high flung as those aspirations may be, such is our rich heritage that we need only to follow the ones already made fundamental; for Mrs. Somers was creative, a born teacher, and in a beautiful way a preacher too, a great personality who made her gifts and graces of true service to humanity.

ANNE SEYMOUR AMES.

When I first met Mrs. Somers on my arrival at the school in the fall of 1900, she was still active, very beautiful and regal in all her appearances before the girls.

I shall never forget her exposition of the Lord's Prayer. It gave the epitome of her religious convictions and yet there was so little of the personal introduced. I am grateful for every contact I had with her lovely spirit and commanding personality.

REBECCA S. ASHLEY.

Mrs. Somers' generosity knew no bounds. Little Doctor Smith when in her service met with an accident to her best gown. It was badly damaged. She had it repaired, but the result was so unsatisfactory that her heart was sore. When Mrs. Somers heard about it, she wrote her a note of sympathy, enclosed in the envelope a sum of money that would buy an even better gown and, when night came, pushed this envelope under the door of Little Doctor's room.

CLARA BROUGHTON HALL.

In my memories, Mrs. Somers looks always the same, not very tall, queenly in carriage, exquisitely groomed with her gleaming white hair perfectly dressed; gowned in shimmering gray silk, silk that murmured but never rustled. Never once did I see Mrs. Somers flustered or hurried, discomposed, embarrassed or in any way perturbed. Her step was even, her voice gentle, her poise perfect. If she spoke to "her children" in reproof, we felt her displeasure no less because of her self-control—for her gentleness was not weakness nor was her serenity lack of perception.

FAITH BRADFORD.

Anything that honors Mrs. Somers' memory is a delight to me. The substance of her last Sunday night talk to our class of eight—graduating the next day or two—is still vivid. I have marked the text in each succeeding Bible used since that June night in 1884. "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil."—John 17: 15. Mrs. Somers spoke of our sheltered lives and how little we knew of the dangers and temptations that faced us. She had sought to teach us spiritual as well as intellectual values. These principles she would have govern our lives as we stepped beyond the threshold of our beloved Alma Mater.

FRANCES SCOVILLE WISHARD.

I have never known her superior. She had wisdom, a keen sense of humor, tact and a charming personality. She told a story admirably, especially if the joke was on herself. I recall her account of her first prayer in public.

She was a young teacher at a Methodist University. She knew that she would be called upon to pray at the teacher's meeting so she composed her prayer, working over it until she was perfectly satisfied. She attended the meeting with a feeling of security which increased as the others prayed. As each professor offered his petition and thanks to Heaven—she thought—"Well my prayer is better than that."

At last the crucial moment came. She was asked to pray. Her self-complacency deserted her—her well-prepared statements vanished—she floundered about with disconnected utterances and finally in desperation asked God to accept her effort—adding, "O Lord, if you can make anything out of it—it is more than I can do." My eternal love and admiration pay homage to her.

MARY STEWART CAREY.

I think of her always as one of the most perfect, most human, most understanding persons that ever lived. What she did for us all, making us her children—seeing the best in us—bringing the best out of us—no one of us can ever forget.

ANNE M. KURTZ.

She created an atmosphere such as one encountered nowhere else. Her charm and cleverness were all pervasive. Her plays on words were delicious.

Once a woman came to the school who was doubtless very fine in her specialty (Natural History I think) but her conversation at table left much to be desired. All of her stories seemed to be about worms—they crawled in and out of every anecdote, and were particularly revolting to Mrs. Somers. After she left, we were discussing her very politely at coffee. Some one said that she spoke such peculiar English—"Yes"—said Mrs. Somers solemnly—"She speaks in her own vermicular."

Once when the Junior verse had been very lovely—ten times better than anything I could write yet—almost unbelievably good for young girls, Mrs. Somers rose and made a most appreciative little speech about it, then turned and, as she shook my hand, whispered, "I won't squeeze your hand because I know it has writer's cramp." It was those constant little whimsicalities gotten off with a perfectly straight face that made her such fun.

I think the secret of her charm was that she found amusement, interest and stimulation in so many different kinds of people and things; she never permitted life to bore her—and consequently till almost the very end, she was capable of giving out that quality of exhilaration and stimulation that was at the root of everything she accomplished.

MARY E. COLGAN.

The congregation of the Church of the Covenant was highly edified one Sunday morning when at Mrs. Somers' arrival during prayer, her girls arose as though touched by a spring and remained standing until she was seated.

Told at Alumnae Meeting.

One morning at 1100 M—I called from the top of the stairs to the girls in the French room below. Mrs. Somers heard me and gave me a kind but effective rebuke. Five minutes later while we were studying, there was a knock at the door. In walked Mrs. Somers with hands folded on her breast—she said, "I scolded Frances and then did the very same thing. I have come to confess and get my scolding."

FRANCES EDMONSTON ROLLOW.

I was young and her exact words have not stayed in my mind but the ideas they expressed have never ceased to influence me. I think of her as constantly holding up before us what it meant to be a real gentlewoman, both in her frequent informal talks to the girls and in her example, so perfectly did she personify the lovely thing she wished us to be.

ELSA MURRAY SHELLY.

Looking backward upon the six years (1898-1904) spent as a teacher in M.V.S., the picture has many angles. But in and through all the figure of Mrs. Somers remains always in focus. It is difficult, however, to portray by words her versatile personality, her wit and her charm. Once upon a time she said to me, and very truthfully: "I have done something of everything in this school except running the elevator."

Many pictures flit across memory's screen. One in the old chapel at 1100 M Street; the occasion the memorable Roman banquet tendered by Miss Elizabeth Stewart's Virgil class to Miss Harriet Walker's group in ancient history. Mrs. Somers sat on the platform to review the august procession of Greeks and Romans as they filed by in marvelous gowns and togas made of draped sheets. Suddenly there was a gasp and a sibilant whisper from Mrs. Somers of: "Thief! Thief! My feathers." as Juno swept regally by with Mrs. Somers' beloved peacock feathers, boldly plucked from the "morning room," artistically swishing from the side of the trailing garment.

The scene changes; a rehearsal of the Senior play was just over at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Somers was there after the girls were gone. She turned to me and asked: "Have you any money with you?" Being assured that a few coins still lingered in the usually flat purse, Mrs. Somers calmly said: "Well! then I'll invite you to have a cold lemonade with me in the Willard Hotel dining room," which same treat promptly took place to our mutual satisfaction. When we reached home Mrs. Somers said, "Now go to the office and tell Miss Brouse to give you your money back."

But pen-power fails me adequately to picture in words Mrs. Somers' face as she saw from her vantage point on the Yale side of the basket-ball field her beloved tiger skin, which we had brazenly purloined from the Music Room dais. With Walker's help we had made him climb a tree—there he was on the other side of the court and with a Princeton flag in his mouth!

These are but glints from the many twinkling lights that still glow through the years, making real the never-to-be-extinguished sparkle that was Mrs. Somers. Life is a more joyous experience because one was privileged to live for a few years in her shining light.

ANNA SAUNDERS KLOTZ.

Out of the vivid pictures that crowd my memories of Mrs. Somers it is difficult to select just one. But many will write of her at school and in Washington. Not so many had the privilege of seeing her at Rock Rest, her lovely summer house perched high above Bluemont in the Blue Ridge Mountains. I visited Elsie Edwards a number of times up there. Once when she and I played guardians for Elizabeth Eddy and a group of her young "pals."

It was all a delight, the informality, the beautiful Shenandoah Valley at our feet, and best of all Mrs. Somers, generally in a reminiscent mood. What tales she could tell of her early life, and of the interesting people she had known.

We lived on the fat of the land, especially just after the big market baskets came up from the city. But slimness of larder had no terrors for Mrs. Somers. Out of the simplest ingredients came the most delectable results. Our special joy was when at supper she would herself preside over the chafing dish, mixing and stirring with those lovely soft hands of hers. She loved doing it, as if it were a release from the formality and the public quality of so much of her life. And how she loved the moment when the concoction was done and we showed our delight at its toothsome-ness. Then she would look smilingly about at our eager appreciative countenances, with the joy of creation shining in her eyes and would say, "Girls, a very fine cook was lost to the world when I decided to become a school ma'am."

How I would like to whisk myself back to that table for a time, and be one of Mrs. Somers' "little maids" again.

GRACE WRIGHT CAPEN '94.

After Mrs. Somers' recovery from an illness, Miss Scull, Associate Principal, came to give report of her stewardship.

"How did things go, Sister Sara?"

"Not so well, Sister Jennie, I have had to expel a girl."

"Expel a girl? What had she done?"

"She flirted from her window with a young man on the street."

"Who was the girl, Sister Sara?"

Miss Scull named the transgressor.

"Oh, Sister Sara, the child has been here three years and at the first sign of life, you expel her!"

J. LORNA GUARD.

It is not your speaking voice, Aunt Jennie objects to—it is your shrieking voice.

The late MRS. TALLMADGE.

Mrs. Somers regarded her cats as persons. One day while at Rock Rest (her summer home), as we sat on the porch, she said to me, "Kitty, who is that coming up the walk?" I looked and said, "I do not see any one, Mrs. Somers."

"Is it Mittie or Rex?"

KATHARINE E. HILL.

May I pass on a remark that made a great impression on me my first month in school? Even then I loved the humor of it and respected the desire that Mrs. Somers expressed when she "hoped that our rugs would be as much worn in front of our desks as in front of our bureaus."

CLARA HOSKINS WILLETT.

I remember most vividly a few of the quotations that Mrs. Somers was continually hammering into us. Over and over she said: "Anything worth while must be paid for, and often the value depends on the price we pay. Nothing is really ours till we have paid the price." She spoke to our class of life as a glorious adventure if we had the eager, courageous enthusiasm that could see the meaning and the use of toil in furthering the triumph of goodness and justice.

What Mrs. Somers did for me personally is a debt I can never repay. She succeeded in creating within me a craving, a thirst for the vital meanings she saw in life.

VILLA WELCH MURRAY.

We all had a Mrs. Somers—each according to his capacity to know and appreciate her. To me she was two things; one, a sort of glorified Mother, an ideal—the other a regal, forceful and exacting Queen more distinguished, more exciting than any Royalty of the story books.

When I left school, she wanted me to stay. "Dear, I need you" she said. "But I can't stay, Mrs. Somers, I must find out about the great big world." My heart grows warm in thinking of her and I know I am better and stronger for having known her. Without her stern example, her gracious yet exacting presence, who among us, her pupils, would have had ingrained into us, in the blood, in the very marrow of our bones—quite the discriminations that we have, the relentless judgments (when we look within ourselves to find them) that she taught us to seek and to encourage the better self to give. She was a grand woman, God bless her!

NONA MURRAY DESCHAMPS.

One hot day just before the opening of school when no elevator was running, something had to be decided by Mrs. Somers. I left Little Doctor on the top floor and went to ask the question. As I entered her sitting room, Mrs. Somers said, "Go find Little Doctor at once." I flew, thinking one of the cats must be dying. Back to the fifth floor down, up and down again at last fairly shouting for her before I located her. We arrived, together, breathless, to have that wicked lady put her hand on Doctor's shoulder and say, "Can't you do something at once for Phila, she has a bad case of the cholera?" Little Doctor gave one indignant look at my very high stylish linen collar, snorted, turned and went out, giving the door a vicious bang. My tormentor chuckled and I subsided in a fit of giggles.

PHILA C. NYE.

"Would like to see you tomorrow morning after chapel in my study."—E. J. S.

It had come! the long-dreaded summons had come and after an afternoon of miserable foreboding and a night of bad dreams in which a great all-powerful judge gave sentence of "guilty of conduct unworthy a lady." I really was not able to go to school the next morning, but that meant only a postponement of the matter; my sole comfort was to get it over.

I went on wobbly knees trying to think in what manner I should appear to Mrs. Somers—as debonair and innocent or as a penitent sinner, pleading for forgiveness. A timid knock was answered by a clear "Come," and in a moment I was before the judge, not of my dreams but one who would, at least, listen to both sides of an argument. Her blue eyes were full of sympathy but also carried the assurance she would by no means spare the guilty.

She sat in her chaise longue—Tarkington the cat was curled up beside her and she apologized for not rising to meet me. Then in her adroit, inimitable way, she led up to the subject in hand.

Mrs. S: "My child, why were you discourteous to Miss Jones in the elocution class. I was greatly surprised and pained to have such a report of you. Miss Jones says you refused to pronounce correctly and persisted in leaving off letters and even endings to words. Did you do that?"

"Oh yes, Mrs. Somers, I told her I never was going to talk through my nose and pronounce R's like she does because"—

Mrs. S: "Well dear, because what?"

"Because it is a matter of principle with me—I would have to break a solemn vow and a promise if I did."

"Why, how is that?"

"Well, you see, Mrs. Somers, when my friends down home knew I was coming north to school, they said it would not be long before I would talk just like the Yankees. Of course that made me furious and I promised I never would."

Mrs. Somers said with a twinkle in her eye, "Did you explain this to Miss Jones?"

"Yes m'm, but she said I would never be an elocutionist unless I stopped leaving off my r's. You know, Mrs. Somers, I don't really leave them off but just do not make a specialty of them like you all do."

Mrs. S: "Dearie, I can see your point of view. All we can do is to tell you the right way and if you cannot do it without sacrificing a principle, then do the best you can for us, but don't forget to beg Miss Jones' pardon for seeming to be impolite to her. Now run along, you will miss your class, I am afraid."

"Oh, Mrs. Somers, is that all you are going to do to me?"

"No, not quite—come here, I want to whisper something in your ear. It is a secret and you must not tell a soul."

"No, I would never tell a secret, Mrs. Somers."

"I like the way you do not talk through your nose and I am going to try to have a soft Southern voice."

"Oh, Mrs. Somers, how I do wish I had not vowed that vow about the r's so I could say them as you do!"

CORNELIA I. MORGAN.

People leave their mark. Mrs. Somers did at a time when I needed understanding and sympathy. The particular quality that I still feel was her adequacy and that of course is the combination of all the others—courage, judgment, self-control, ability, honesty, dignity. Then too she was amused by us and amusing. Her appearance too continues to impress me—nor is that a superficial thing!

MARGARET JENNINGS BAKEWELL.

Looking over photographs which Mrs. Somers had brought back with her from Egypt, I found the Palace of Luxor, the Hall of Columns, Temple of Karnak, the Sphinx as I expected—but suddenly my eye fell on one which needed more than a passing glance. A moonlight night, the Sphinx, and in the foreground—two figures—a man and a girl! He had brought his donkey near to hers, her head was on his shoulder—her expression beatific and underneath these simple words: "The Minx by Spoonlight."

VIGNETTES:

Mrs. Somers looking out of the window of Benjamin (her Franklin car) at a flock of white leghorns and saying, "I'll never be quite happy till I own a chicken farm."

Her face as she told about the ducks bought one morning from the huckster at her mountain home and turned loose while the man went on his huckstering way—and how surprised he was when he reached his home, several miles distant, that afternoon to see his ducks waddle forth to greet him.

The sanctum at 204 F. Mamie Wheeler long since gone to her reward and a young H.B.W. on the lounge, somewhat rebellious and impenitent after a prank, but melting utterly when She took up her Bible, found a book-marked page and read gently, "My own familiar friends have turned against me."

Commencement—youth, beauty, flowers, music and Mrs. Somers, seventy-five years old in her crown of white and gown of silvery gray, the focus of every eye—even the parents watching her.

HARRIET B. WALKER.

Soon after my Mother's death, which left me young and inexperienced to take her place—to comfort my father and my younger brothers and sisters—I met Mrs. Somers. She had known my grandparents and my parents and naturally spoke words of comfort to me. Her loving understanding, her sympathy touched me to the heart. I remember that I left her with a blessed sense of strength and renewed courage.

CLARA A. LUTZ.

One day at 1100 M—I went rushing around the corner in the hall on the second floor to go to my room and ran right into Mrs. Somers fairly hard. Mrs. Somers, a trifle startled and shaken, said in her inimitable way, "I refuse to be knocked down by one of my own children." Doesn't that show how she regarded her flock?

DOROTHY WILLING.

Memories surge and yet those that stand out as especially describing Mrs. Somers—those that are most precious—concern me too intimately for me to write of them. I think of her little personal word of comfort or cheer, the word of praise in time of need, the comradely handclasp and always that smile so much her very own—smiling lips and smiling, sometimes twinkling, eyes.

CORA WALKER HAYES.

In the early days of M.V.S. very small girls came to the day school. Among them was a brown-eyed little witch, Fannie Kaspar by name; when graduated in the Class 1900—Francesca, now Mrs. Huron W. Lawson. Then as today the girls walked two by two into chapel according to size. Fannie naturally headed the line and was so overcome (?) by the honor that she not only giggled herself but set other little girls to giggling. Such conduct had to be rebuked, so Mrs. Somers interviewed the small culprit who finally, pressed too hard for explanation, retorted, "Well, it just serves you right for putting the littlest girl at the front." Mrs. Somers told the story with great enjoyment. How she did love mental spice and ginger!

Mrs. Somers was a very great lady—I emphasize each word. One element of greatness she possessed in eminent degree—magnanimity—not in the narrowed sense of our usage but in the rich meaning of the original—magnus animus—that quality of soul that impels toward largeness of thought and action. As instances may I cite soon after my arrival at 1100 M, receiving a check for salary two weeks before it was due because Mrs. Somers thought teachers needed money after the long vacation; again at Christmas the invitation to spend the holidays at the school as her guests and crowning example when at the end of a visit under that hospitable roof Little Doctor discovered that I had the mumps. Said Mrs. Somers to me, "Go upstairs and quarantine yourself and be at home until you are well."

Henry James once told me that certain things in a school were "so civilizing, so civilizing," meaning by those words all that Matthew Arnold included in his "Sweetness and Light," all that the noblest of the Greeks meant by the term civilization. Mrs. Somers passing through a room full of girls, by her mere presence, was "so civilizing, so civilizing."

MAUD RYLAND KELLER.

The Editor regrets that the names of two valued friends and admirers of Mrs. Somers are missing from this list. Mrs. Robert Lansing, a member of the Class of '84, and Mrs. Earl Cranston, widow of Bishop Cranston and formerly a member of the Faculty. The cause in both cases was illness. Mrs. Cranston's arthritis, which for the time being, made it no more possible for her "to write—especially at the date set—than to build the Pyramids."

LOOKING BACKWARD

Mrs. Hensley

Sword of Justice, Miracle of Selflessness, Incarnation of High Courage.

Enshrined

What shall I say of Mrs. Hensley? For the memory of her is still so keen as to be one of the pains which is the price of love.

I am again a little girl, going slowly up a long flight of stairs, turning secretly to look down into the little office, hoping to see Mrs. Hensley at her desk. Perhaps the chair is empty and I meet her on the stairs and she smiles at me and speaks. Then my cup fills, and if she guesses at the great love in my small heart and puts her arm lightly about me, my cup runs over.

I see her standing in the corridor watching the long line of girls filing slowly up to Chapel. There is a shaft of sunlight on her brown hair, her eyes are sweet and tender, contradicting a little the patient sadness of her mouth. Except when she smiled her mouth was always wistful.

Again I am a little girl and Mrs. Hensley has come in to hear the class recite. My heart thumps with terror lest I disgrace myself in confusion before that sweet being whom I wish so passionately to think well of me.

I am no longer a little girl, but a grave senior with the right to study in the Reading Room, to sit in class in a chair with a book arm, not as the children do on a bench behind a desk! And, since Mrs. Somers no longer does actual teaching, I am clothed in the highest honour the classroom affords, I am in two of the classes of the Assistant Principal, Mrs. Adelia Gates Hensley. There almost I forgot the Dearly-Beloved woman in the Teacher. Under one other, only, has the great processional of the ages marched with such vividness before my eyes, The stout plain black history book became a jewelled casket by the magic of her words. Her eyes were bright, a lovely pink crept into her cheeks, the charm she poured out upon the dust of long dead bones and the ashes of empires, raised them again to life and power.

Or perhaps it was the class in Art History. In the long years since, some of us have gone on weary feet looking at drab sights, but we have had our day, we have seen through her beauty-loving eyes the great works that man hath wrought, temples and cathedrals, shining marbles and glowing canvases.

I knew of Mrs. Hensley's last illness only a day or so before her death and when she died I could not believe it possible. I had seen Mrs. Somers, still gracious and tranquil, but fragile with the delicate transparent loveliness of one growing old and ready to leave the slight burden of the flesh, but Mrs. Hensley never seemed to me to have passed the prime of life. The last time I saw her beautiful blue eyes they were as young as I had ever known them, her sad mouth smiled as sweetly, the blood was warm in her cheek.

It has been my privilege to know a little of the influence of books in their effect on life and character. It is an infinitely greater privilege to have built what learning I have had on the foundation of the influence of the two exceptional and unforgettable women, Elizabeth J. Somers and Adelia Gates Hensley.

FAITH BRADFORD.

The Friend

In the fall of 1898, a new teacher arrived at M.V.S. Within the open door of 1100 M Street stood Mrs. Somers, graciously waiting to welcome the newcomer, whom she had already met once before. Greetings over, Mrs. Somers turned, saying proudly: "And this is Mrs. Hensley." Looking upward, there appeared to the weary traveler a radiant vision, which remains undimmed to this day.

Halfway down the broad stairs, clad in a long and dainty white gown, with one perfect hand resting lightly on the balustrade, stood the beautiful Friend-to-be! A faint, shy, flush mantled her cheeks, but her sweet smile and kindly eyes gave token of that rare unselfconsciousness that was so characteristic of Mrs. Hensley. She never posed, she simply lived sincerely, loved faithfully, and was beloved truly.

From that moment dates an unbroken friendship, which has ever been—and still is—the challenge and the goal of all worthy efforts. It was symbolic that she came down from above, not in condescension, but in natural gravitation, for one could never help but look upward to Mrs. Hensley.

And what a Friend she was! Loyal and just, with high standards, expecting much, yet unbelieving of any but the best things so far as her friends were concerned; and by her own magnet of fairness drawing always the scattered gold of their natures from its alloying dross.

In the background of the idealized portrait of Mrs. Hensley there is a shining vista, and her haunting smile seems to beckon us to follow, as she passes for a little while beyond our mental ken. But today I paint the word-picture of personal remembrance, since her spirit yet hovers over me, and I am still looking upward with loving gratitude to My Friend!

ANNA SAUNDERS KLOTZ.

I place below her portrait in the Gray Room of M.V.S. a daily offering of flowers, sometimes the yellow roses of her choice, and in memory traverse the years to that long-ago spring-time when, bereaved and sore-distressed, I came to M.V.S. and found a friend, loving and beloved.

NETTA C. MURPHEY.

The Teacher

There is a photograph of Mrs. Hensley, taken during the late eighties, which shows a young head with hair softly drawn back from the fine brow, clear eyes looking straight at one, and a face which, with all its youthful curves and softness, gave instant impression of strength and great reserves.

Though one of the younger members of the faculty, she already held a unique place in the hearts of her pupils, who conveyed to you by warmth of tone and kindling eyes, a realization of your good fortune to be enrolled with them in her class book. To me her methods opened a new world, for I had come direct from a quaint little school in the North Carolina hills, where one learned the lesson and recited it accurately. Here, the daily assignment was to be discussed, and this required a grasp of the exact content of an entirely new character. This I learned during the first recitation, in which we new members took but little part, merely glimpsing the vistas opening before us, which subsequent classwork would make it possible to explore. You who have grown up under this method of fostering the individual presentation of a subject in recitation can have no idea of the reaction of such an innovation upon young minds eager to learn and ready to assimilate. Remember that I am speaking of pioneer days in this field, and recalling the youthful years of the second of our M.V.S. heads. Mrs. Somers and her faculty were blazing trails for all serious educators. This school was far in advance of its contemporary Boarding Schools for Young Ladies, offering a new standard of study and deportment. "Pranks" had no place here; the honor system had effectually eliminated them. Instead there was present the attitude one finds now in the college girl; in that period a very significant thing, as it was the exception for a girl of my generation to elect college, but the rule to spend a year or more at a finishing school. Here the finish came with the work well done and we were sent forth with a clearer conception of what was ahead than were many of my friends who had elected other schools. The M.V.S. staff had been selected with the greatest care by a shrewd judge of character, and it was headed by Miss Lydia M. Dame, Miss Theodate Smith, and Mrs. Hensley. Already Mrs. Hensley had been singled out, for during my senior year she was called to head the faculty, and held this position until she became Headmistress.

From the vantage point of later years one traces step by step the steady development of the power so early felt in that young teacher who came from her college work to undertake the training of younger minds eager for knowledge, and quickly sensitive to the unusual qualities in their leader. She seemed to us a gray-eyed Athena, inciting us to achieve the best that was in us. Do not gather from this that we ever thought her inaccessible; on the contrary, there was never the least hesitation or lack of warmth in her understanding response to any appeal. One always came away from a conference inspired to try again, if one had been discouraged; or grateful for the chance to have some escapade relegated to the realm of forgotten things—not that we forgot, but we cherished the hope that others would! In retrospect one realizes the skill with which she carefully nursed our young enthusiasms, allowing us to explore but not exhaust ourselves in excursions adown the paths to which she had led us. We thanked her by the results we brought to her classroom. Count the number of her pupils today; note how far they have gone along the paths she set them on, or encouraged them to follow, and you will begin to recognize how much originated within the safe shelter of her classroom.

Much later it was my privilege to be assigned as assistant instructor in Art History during the last year in which she conducted that class. This gave me the unique opportunity to look back over a remarkable career. Experience had but intensified those qualities by which we had profited, broadened the already unusual vision, deepened the always sensitive grasp of subject, and so produced the perfect fruit from the lovely flower of her early womanhood.

PHILA C. NYE.

A tribute to Mrs. Hensley! I feel utterly at a loss as to how to express myself, for my love for her has been so real and my indebtedness to her so great.

As I write this the rare beauty of her face and figure come vividly before me. How amazing was her understanding and sympathy for us and our school-girl problems! Such trivial difficulties to her who had so fully lived—but we never knew that, and looking back I realize that she always helped and comforted and never failed.

She had the peculiar faculty of making us want to be our finest. I am sure that we who came close to her and knew her best, call her truly blessed for all she gave us.

How often in my busiest and most trying times, I see in a flash with that "inward eye" the lovely Music Room of 1100 M Street on a Sunday evening, with the girls gathered together for a simple service, and then I hear Mrs. Hensley's dear, gentle voice saying, "Girls, to thine own self be true."

How can I ever forget or cease to be thankful?

MARY DAY BOYD.

The Builder

When I came to M.V.S. in 1905 Mrs. Somers had plans on display for a new school, but advancing years and physical infirmity prevented their realization. In 1914, she definitely abandoned further activity in school life and leased the school to Mrs. Hensley. During those years, 1914-1916, Mrs. Hensley realized the possibility of the school if it could be housed anew and its certain discontinuance if it were to remain at 1100 M Street. How vividly I recall Mrs. Hensley's summoning me to her office and saying in her quiet way, "This school deserves to live. It will die unless a new building is erected. If you will help me I'll undertake it."

Few were the preliminary gestures. Her plans were already matured in her mind, to build a new school, establish it on a strong foundation, remove it permanently from private ownership and leave it to future generations with its background of beauty and gracious womanhood upon which to trace the new patterns of life as each succeeding generation should envision them. Her faith in the absolute right of the school to live because of its imperishable quality of truth and beauty has been justified. It seems to have softened the harsh outlines that a post-war period threw upon its canvas and withstood the extremes of a feminine freedom that it precipitated. With a simplicity and directness so characteristic of her, Adelia Gates Hensley raised the necessary funds to insure the building program, instinctively selected a poet-artist for the school architect and the dream building began to take shape.

Mrs. Hensley displayed a fine business acumen in those building days, demanding the best materials and fine workmanship to bring into being the charming plans drawn by Wesley Sherwood Bessell. The simple Georgian architecture with its sense of directness and strength is a fitting embodiment for her spirit; the broad acres of the campus an eternal temple to enshrine her courage, her faith, her power.

The new M.V.S. is a monument to its builder—Adelia Gates Hensley.

JEAN DEAN COLE.

The Headmistress

"Dear Daughters:

The date of this Annual (1915) marks the fortieth birthday of Mount Vernon Seminary and with sadness of heart, I am making it the birthday of my retirement from school activities.

You who have known the school within the past thirty years will understand why I feel Mrs. Hensley to be my natural successor. You have experienced her strong sense of justice, her wisdom in dealing with girls and their problems, her great self-command and her grasp of all conditions incident to school life, however difficult they might be.

These rare endowments in combination with rich scholarship have made Mrs. Hensley Associate Principal of the school for the past thirteen years. I now resign to her the work so dear to my heart, in full confidence that, under her wise administration, there will be no change in the ideals and standards of the school, and that its every highest interest will be zealously safeguarded.

Faithfully yours,

ELIZABETH J. SOMERS."

Since 1884, when Adelia Gates had entered Mount Vernon Seminary as a teacher, time and circumstance as though aware of the rare personality hidden behind the shyness and reticence and self-effacement, "had prepared her for this hour and when it came, how masterfully she met it—a singular selflessness almost beyond the power of comprehension had made the transition possible. Years of ill-health had necessitated Mrs. Somers' coming and going to be uncertain. For long periods of time, the full responsibility was Mrs. Hensley's; then Mrs. Somers would take the reins and silently and gracefully Mrs. Hensley would step aside—not always an easy role—perhaps as suddenly to resume the leadership.

How quickly and deftly, how simply, how almost majestically in her dignity when the leadership became definitely hers, she made ready for the rebirth only those who were at her side knew; how successfully the present M.V.S. bears witness."

The signing of the peace treaty found a new era begun with the school in its new home—her Greater M.V.S.

The first five years were exhaustingly busy—interest and debt payments to meet as well as multitudinous educational demands. Soon, however, a sound financial policy was instituted and far-reaching plans made for the betterment and growth of the school— increase in salaries, tentative arrangements for retirement pensions, sabbatical leave—and a self-denying incorporation accomplished which abandoned definitely and forever private ownership and placed control in a board of directors who should choose their own successors but whose financial interest, in every case, should cease at death.

Gatesley was built by Mrs. Hensley and in her will left to Mount Vernon Seminary as the home of future headmistresses.

Then came the shadow of death in the spring of 1923 and before Thanksgiving the stunning shock of death itself. Her body was laid to rest in beautiful Oak Hill, but her pure spirit lives in the hearts of hundreds who came under her influence—imperishable! indelible!

The Student Council, to which the Councillors were invited, meets regularly every Saturday at 8:30. The presiding officer is the President of the Student Body. Members are Presidents of Optima, of the four Classes, of the Athletic Association, the Chairman of the Junior College Privilege List and a Secretary elected from the Junior Class. Faculty members are Miss Cole, Miss Blakeslee, Miss Brown and Miss Hastings who sit in and, as a general thing, speak when addressed. The organization is in Cabinet form, each student-member being head of a department. Order, Dress, Library, Attendance, Junior College Social Relations, Health, Promptness; each head reports on conditions in her department. Problems of general interest are also discussed.

MOUNT VERNON SEMINARY COUNCIL

The third meeting of the Mount Vernon Seminary Council was called to order at 9:15 Saturday morning, April 22, by the Chairman, Katherine Higgins Riley. Mrs. Riley opened the meeting with an address of welcome to the delegates, giving a résumé of the first Council meeting and restating the objects of the Council. She said that the second year the delegates had begun to realize the scope and possibilities of the Council; this year we ought to be ready to do real work. Last year the principal subject was the relation of the Alumnae to the school. Mrs. Riley feels that Mount Vernon is outstanding in this relationship. This year the subject of leisure time has been chosen on merits of its importance in relation to school life. Mrs. Riley explained that the Council had been called this year over the week-end in order that more time might be given the delegates to come to know the faculty and students and to discuss the problems of the Council. In conclusion Mrs. Riley appealed to Miss Cole to redefine the word "leisure."

Miss Cole feels that the Council is a point of contact and that through its meetings points of view from various sections of the country are taken back to other sections, and that through its educational processes the M.V.S. Council bears a direct relation to the world. Miss Cole believes that the Council is a definite element in M.V.S. life and that Mrs. Riley's vision of the Council as a whole has been a splendid factor in making this contribution. In defining "leisure" Miss Cole stated that she feels we should rather call it "unscheduled time," for leisure time is not time in which to do nothing. Thinking over and analyzing the problem of leisure might have far-reaching effects in this great country of ours. Miss Cole reminded us of the quotation: "Tell me what you do with your leisure time and I will tell you what manner of man you are." In the use of the term "activities" in the school schedule there is a possibility that that work implies too much perpetual motion, for activities are really hobbies, i.e., real interests. The majority of schools have four major subjects and such things as music, studio, art and voice are extra—a situation which may possibly put wrong emphasis on the arts as it makes them extra curricular. The M.V.S. program incorporates all of these usual extra-curricular activities into the Academic program with credit for each. M.V.S. feels that a normal healthy girl can carry twenty periods a week with twenty hours of preparation. The system of activities inaugurated at M.V.S. is based on the theory that if a girl takes four majors a year she can make up the twenty required hours by courses in music or art.

Charts, which had been prepared by the girls for the Council, illustrating scheduled and unscheduled time, were distributed by them and explained by Miss Cole. The charts showed that although there are a good number of unscheduled hours, they are very seldom in a block. In Preparatory School, Friday night was formerly study hour but never a completely successful one. It was decided to make Friday night free time with the house quiet for rest, sewing, reading, study, the Tea House for cards, music—the gymnasium for roller skating. Saturday is an unscheduled day save for morning study hall, while Sunday is almost entirely unscheduled time.

Lessons are planned for the average student. There are apparently three reasons for pressure in a girls' school life. First, the girl is either dull or slow. Second, the girl may choose to take an extra two hours or so rather than another year. Third, the girl is so full of interest, enthusiasm and ambition that she takes academically only what is required but elects all extra-curricular activities she can possibly carry. The average girl carries 19.7 hours. At the moment M.V.S. has eleven girls who are carrying 22 hours and fourteen girls who are carrying 21 hours. The Junior College is on the same basis but the girls have more time, as they stay up longer at night.

Miss Cole spoke of a questionnaire which she had compiled and submitted to the girls in order to see how their time is being spent. Girls elected by members of the four classes are to give résumés of the results of their questionnaire to the Council.

Mrs. Riley asked the Councillors to report on the schools they had visited in preparation for the Council Meeting.

Mrs. Durand had visited Miss Wheeler's School and reported that it is very much like M.V.S. The girls do not seem conscious of pressure. They like to sew, play four hands on the piano and read poetry in their leisure time.

Miss Foerderer talked to the faculty of the Shipley School and spoke of their "quiet day" during which nothing is scheduled, the idea being that the day is for meditation, contemplation and spiritual growth. At tea time, there is a general discussion of how the day was spent. The girls may walk in the country, or stay at school and read, or in any other way they choose spend the day quietly. This occurs about four times a year.

Mrs. Strauss reported for the Finch School. There are no study hours on Saturday and one afternoon a week the girls may go out to tea.

Mrs. Clark in reporting on her visit to the Spence School, said that she feels the schedule is very similar to Mount Vernon's and that the secretary gave her the feeling that the regulation of pressure and leisure should come from the school administration. When Mrs. Clark asked how much time was unscheduled she was told that an effort is made to eliminate free time by planning continually for the girls. Many trips are made to art exhibitions, museums, theatres, etc.

Mrs. Shelly reported on the Baldwin School saying that their afternoon until 5:30, with the exception of one hour for athletics and all day Saturday, is free time. Mrs. Shelly also reported that no girl she had spoken to felt pressure in her schedule.

Mrs. Fairfax had visited Chevy Chase (Junior College) and reported that classes are held from 8:20 in the morning until 4:30 in the afternoon with all the rest of the day free or for study. Privileges are taken away if work is not finished. Saturday morning is devoted to sight seeing and Saturday afternoons are free. The girls are as free as girls in college, are not chaperoned and go off campus in groups of three. Mrs. Fairfax spoke of the successful musical comedy which each year is presented by the school, the proceeds of which are given to Charity.

Mrs. Dall reported that in the Academy of the Sacred Heart there is no free time, as even a half an hour twice a week for letter writing is included in the schedule and that the group seems to be a very healthy and happy one.

Miss Slaughter reported that at Ferry Hall there are seven periods a day until 3:10 in the afternoon with athletics scheduled during that time. From 3:10 until 5:00 is absolutely free time and the older girls may go off campus. From 5:00 to 6:00 is quiet hour.

Mrs. Riley reported on her visit to Pine Manor (Junior College). The average week is 19 hours with preparation for each subject varying from 1 to 3 hours a week. Classes meet from 9 A.M. until 3:40 P.M. Extra-curricular activities include French Club, Glee Club, I.R.C. Club, Christian and Athletic Associations and College Government. There is no point system but no student may hold more than one major office. Hours after 7 o'clock are spent in study with relatively few absences Saturday and Sunday, and week-ends last from Saturday noon to Monday noon. Monday morning is the time for a sleep-over—a cherished tradition of the school.

Miss Cole then told us of the questionnaire she had sent to thirty-four schools asking if there is a feeling of pressure in their schedules. Almost every headmistress answered, yes. Most of them felt that it is an American tradition to be pressed for time. Only one headmistress had a solution. She declared that there is no feeling of pressure in her school as every girl is required for one half hour after luncheon "to be horizontal." Miss Cole asked whether the Council felt that there is a growing irritation against scheduled time, saying that with less scheduled time it would be inevitable that all group activities disappear.

Rose Modisette, of the Yellow Class, a school great granddaughter, *résumé*d the report from her class of the questionnaire which had been given the girls by Miss Cole. She said that some few girls felt the schedule to be too heavy and as a possible means of helping to lighten it suggested the following:

1. Registration might be combined with roll call of sports.
2. Elimination of early Wednesday morning assembly.
3. Registration time Saturday might be closer to the dinner hour.
4. Registration might be upstairs instead of in Post Office Hall.
5. Visiting might be permitted from 9:15 to 9:45 P.M.
6. One free unscheduled Sunday evening a month.
7. No gymnasium periods during morning classes.
8. More regular and systematized assignments.
9. Elimination of class meetings except when absolutely necessary.

In conclusion Miss Modisette expressed the appreciation of the girls for the free time over the week-ends.

Miss Harris, of the Third Form, from the Yellow Class, was asked if many additional unscheduled meetings were held. Miss Harris said she felt that many things had come up in extra class meetings which applied to the school as a whole, and so might be dealt with in student body meetings. Miss Walker said judging from luncheon announcements there are many class meetings called for a few minutes. Miss Cole said that nothing is permitted to be scheduled from luncheon at 2 P.M. until 4:30 P.M. except athletics. Uniform inspection is one exception to this rule and takes ten minutes very occasionally. It was brought out that during inter-class game seasons, song practices are frequently necessary but that Class Meetings regularly every other week are not always important.

Wanda Pike, of the White Class, *résumé*d the report from her classmates saying that 16 per cent of the girls felt they had too much pressure. She said there seemed to be a general feeling that not enough time is available to visit and make friends, to read, mend, etc. Miss Pike had only two suggestions other than those made by the Yellow Class:

The recommendation that two physical education classes a week be eliminated and that this time be rearranged.

That all meetings before 6 o'clock be scheduled, leaving 6 to 6:30 always entirely free.

Eleanor McNeir and Eleanor Pearson, a school granddaughter, represented the Junior Class.

Miss Cole explained and defined the Ingenuity Contest saying that it is now a school tradition of eighteen or twenty years' standing. The Junior Class suggested that one contest in the future take the place of the series as there are constantly more and more channels through which experience such as that gained by the Ingenuity Contest, may be obtained, i.e., the Dramatic Workshop, the Publication Contest, etc. The Juniors feel that finish is not so essential as general participation in the spirit of the evening and are very desirous that the Ingenuity Contest be modified and kept a part of M.V.S. life. Miss Cole gave a list of the causes of extra and unscheduled meetings:

The Junior-Senior Banquet.

The Junior Vaudeville.

The Ingenuity Contest.

Extra Song and Cheer Practices.

The Athletic Banquet.

The Optima Banquet, etc.,

and emphasized the fact that none of these is absolutely necessary. They are all choices on the part of the student. Miss Cole generalized the issue by adding that the ever-present problem in life is the question of "elect to do, versus have to do."

Marguerite Beach had been elected spokesman for the Senior Class and in making her report stated that her class does not feel it has too much scheduled time for fulfilling the requirements of graduation. Miss Beach said she felt, however, that there is not such a free choice of decision as there might be.

Betty Field, the Senior Class President, reiterated the remarks of Miss Beach and said she felt the Juniors and the Seniors were in agreement on the issues involved.

After the recess, Miss Beach supplemented her remarks and suggested long term planning in order to offer a girl the possibility of realizing the scope of her work over a period of time. She also suggested that each girl make an individual chart in order to help her visualize the way in which her time is spent. Miss Cole answered that every preparatory school girl is required to block out her schedule of work, play and study.

Miss Blakeslee spoke as a faculty adviser and said that in her opinion the girls feel quite free to come to the faculty advisers for assistance in planning their schedules and in readjusting conflicts. Question was raised as to Current Events Class. Current Events and Hygiene Classes are held regularly from 8:15 to 8:45, but it was agreed to rearrange the schedule so that these classes fall the last period on Wednesday.

Miss Ames spoke most thoughtfully of the parallelism in judging the balance of quality and quantity and the balance of pressure and leisure.

Miss Herriot spoke for the faculty in analyzing the problem of school pressure and how it might be eliminated. Suggestions were made as to fewer play productions, reducing the number of issues of the Broadside, etc. She also suggested that by looking ahead and planning, more conflicts and much pressure might be avoided, and that the faculty is united in its desire to work with the girls toward that end. She cited this year's commencement play cast of four as an example of lightening the burden of extra hours of rehearsal for more than a very few.

Mr. Lloyd, speaking of the question of loyalty, said that one can of course only be true to oneself and stressed the necessity of giving the girls complete freedom of choice. Miss Beach added that choice must be based on fundamental truths rather than on emotions. The question was raised as to whether the present pressure comes from tradition or from election.

Miss Cole reminded the Council that the development of responsibility takes time and said that she feels that where there is student government the responsibility is actually passing from the faculty to the undergraduates. Students are asking for responsibilities and they are being given to them. Miss Cole believes that quiet is individual responsibility. It is the urge of the times to plan and be busy. Scheduled hours are worked out mechanically and meticulously by the faculty and Miss Cole feels that further planning is a personal student responsibility. The question was asked as to whether a faculty member could advise a student accurately as to the probable demands to be made upon her time. Mrs. Somers was quoted as saying: "The first law of life is repose and there is a second law like unto it—repose and a third law also—repose," and "Life holds only one duty at a time."

In a general discussion of pressure, Miss Cole stressed the fact that it is a recognized element in life today, and emphasized the importance of adjusting one's mental stability rather than spending so much time on the physical details of existence. There are three elements which contribute to a full life: the physical, the mental and the spiritual, and each must be recognized and developed. Fundamentally pressure is an attitude of the mind.

Miss Hanna defined the word "school" in its original translation as meaning "leisure time devoted to learning." She feels that school offers the opportunity to learn, but all things need not be learned in a few short years.

Miss Cole suggested that an "inheritance book" be compiled by the present Senior Class for the Junior College in which should be included those things which the present Seniors feel will be helpful in the future.

After various announcements, the meeting was declared adjourned until 2:30.

The Council reconvened at 2:30 Saturday afternoon. Reports from the various Chapters of the M.V.S. Society were given.

Mrs. Dall reported that the bridge parties held by the Boston Chapter had been most successful as a means of raising the money for carrying on the Social Service work in which the Boston girls are interested.

Miss Succop spoke of the soup kitchen which had been operated again this past winter by the M.V.S. girls in Pittsburgh and of the chapter's approval of the suggested merger of the M.V.S. Society and the Alumnae Association.

Miss Shelly reported that the Philadelphia Chapter had adopted a family for the winter and had been extremely busy providing for its various needs.

Miss Slaughter contributed the final payment of the pledge of $300.00 from the Chicago branch to the Scholarship Fund, and spoke of the financial success of their Rummage Sale and especially of their delight in Miss Cole's visit to Chicago in the Spring.

Mrs. Masters reported that the New York girls had contributed to and were much interested in the Scholarship Fund.

Mrs. Riley then declared the Business Meeting opened. Miss Foerderer moved that the reading of the minutes of last year's Council meeting be omitted. The motion was seconded and carried.

Mrs. Nye, Chairman of Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, read a suggested amendment to the By-Law, Article IV, Number III, as follows:

All officers shall be elected for one year with the privilege of re-election.

Miss Slaughter moved that the amendment be adopted. The motion was variously seconded and passed.

Mrs. Foerderer read the report of the Nominating Committee with the names of the following officers to be elected for the coming year:

Chairman, MRS. PHILA CALDER NYE.

Vice-Chairman, MRS. VIRA HOLCOMB WINSOR.

Executive Secretary, MRS. CHARLES COVODE DAVIS.

It was moved and carried that the report of the Nominating Committee be accepted as read and the Secretary was ordered to cast the ballot.

Miss Walker, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Dall were named the Committee on Resolutions.

Miss Walker spoke of the question of the merger and said that it should be voted on at the Alumnae Reunion in May. After discussion, Miss Foerderer suggested that the recommendation of the merger by the Council be reported at the Alumnae Association Meeting on Monday.

There being no further business, Mrs. Nye, the new presiding officer, declared the Meeting adjourned.

* * * *

In Chapel on Monday Mrs. Riley addressed the assembled school as follows:

Once more I bring to the entire student body the greeting of the Council.

We have had three of the most perfect days that Spring has given to Washington this year—and to paraphrase a statement Henry Van Dyke made about the wild strawberry, "Doubtless God could have made better days but doubtless God never did." They have been stimulating days—from the pleasure we "old girls" have had in revisiting our former haunts; meeting each other and the Faculty and getting a little acquainted with you; all through the deliberations of the Council and the very clear, concise and artistic Senior Essays—to the beauty and sincerity of Sunday Chapel and the glorious organ music—it has been a busy and a happy week-end.

I suppose you are wondering what it is all about and what conclusions we have reached, so I am going to read you the resolutions we have adopted in the summing up of the main points of our consideration. But I want you to realize that the greatest values of such a conference are intangible and cannot be crystallized into words. It is not entirely simple for so large a group as this to come together with widely varying points of view, to talk things over frankly and fully and then to go our separate ways with a feeling of friendliness and admiration even for them who have not agreed with us; to be willing to admit that we have learned something and have broadened our own horizon as well as having given the other fellow some mighty good ideas.

In this particular question of the apportionment of time, interest is almost universal, for pressure is keenly felt today by every one throughout our troubled world. The choice of the use of time is individual. It takes great character and much judgment to say: "This I want and must have—I am willing to pay the price of letting go some other thing that I also would like but which is not quite so important to my well-being."

Arnold Bennett once wrote a little book called, "How to live on twenty-four hours a day." Read it if you can—it is full of sane thinking and he reminds us that we each and every one have all the time there is. It is up to us to put into it and get out of it what will best suit our individual development.

Then let us be patient and not expect to solve all these problems quickly. Most worth-while things grow slowly; ideas develop with much pondering and thinking and patience.

So we councillors have tried to express some of the thoughts brought out in our session Saturday in the following words:

The Committee on Resolutions take pleasure in reporting the results of the third meeting of the M.V.S. Council. They feel that the discussion concerning "Unscheduled Time" was stimulating and thought-provoking to an amazing degree, alike to councillors, faculty and students.

Their findings are as follows:

1. The need of a clear and well-defined understanding on the part of faculty and students as to the implications of the words "loyalty" and "school-spirit."
2. The recognition of the great value of the emotions as springs of action but the equally great danger that lies in their wrongful use when dealing with sincere and conscientious youth. The necessity for those who advise, to aid these students in preserving such a balance as will lead to intellectual and spiritual poise.
3. The realization on the part of students that they are privileged to make free choices in regard to extra-curricular activities and that such choices once made are not irrevocable. The assurance that withdrawal honestly based entails not criticism but respect and admiration; that such actions develop strength of character and are a long step forward toward the solution of the graver problems that are ahead.

The Committee expresses for the Members of the M.V.S. Council sincere appreciation to Miss Cole for a generous and truly delightful hospitality but for far more than that—the privilege of sharing in her pride in these girls and their accomplishments under Mount Vernon's fostering care. The Councillors came eager to help—they themselves have been helped. They go away refreshed, strengthened, inspired!

Writes one of the delegates to the Council:

"The meeting this year seemed such a thrilling, vital thing to me and I appreciate more than I can say the opportunity of sharing those inspirational days. I am intensely proud of belonging to such a group although my personal contribution is hard to discover.

"I hope that each new member will take up the trust as a torch passed on."

THE MERGER

At the Council in April of 1932, a question arose as to whether we should continue to use the word "Alumna" in a restricted sense. Mrs. Strauss spoke for the Adelia Gates Hensley Chapter of the M.V.S. Society as desiring the Alumnae Association to be open to non-graduates. Discussion resulted in a resolution made by Miss Walker and seconded by Miss Ames.

"Resolved, that in the Alumnae Association of Mount Vernon Seminary, the word 'alumna' be used in the larger sense and include graduate and non-graduate members."

This consideration by the Council was to be presented to the Alumnae Association for such further action as was deemed desirable by them.

The Alumnae Association at the Reunion in May, realizing the many changes involved in both the Association and the M.V.S. Society, did not act directly on the above resolution, but considered the advisability of combining the Alumnae Annual and the Roll Call as a matter both of economy and efficiency. The President suggested that a committee be appointed and that no action be taken for another year. Much discussion followed, resulting in the following motion.

Motion: "That the President be empowered to appoint a committee to consider the details connected with the merging of the Alumnae Association and the M.V.S. Society." Carried.

This Committee, composed of Miss Cole, Miss Foerderer and Miss Walker, began its deliberations by re-reading the following report of the Elizabeth Somers Chapel Committee presented by Anne Seymour Ames, its chairman, at the Reunion.

"A question arises concerning the advisability of including in a broader fellowship the word 'Alumnae,' so that the two distinctive groups, graduates and non-graduates, might yet stand shoulder to shoulder in the shelter of one Alma Mater. Because there was so beautiful a blending in loyalty and service in the building of our Chapel, perhaps none can speak with more experience than the members of the Chapel Committee. If ever there was a 'Road of loving hearts,' the way to the Chapel was that road. Literally every part of the Memorial represented the starry pilgrimage of the wise men, bearing gold, frankincense and myrrh. Many voices, silent for years, became articulate in words and sacrificial gifts. There are on record remembrances representing every single year in the school's history. In the difficult years of building, there was no distinction between graduates and non-graduates, but the perfect coming together of what Mrs. Somers used to call 'my daughters.' There is proof of this in every part of the Elizabeth Somers Chapel. One cannot approach the four lovely entrance columns without realizing that, while the two portal columns are the gift of faculty and loyal girls then resident, the other two columns, flanking them to right and left, are the gifts of Marjorie Post Hutton and Sallie Huston Rowe, both non-graduates.

"Instances of sacrifice are so numerous that it is very difficult to particularize, yet there are two self-abnegating illustrations our Chapel Committee can never forget—the fine spirit of a graduate alumna who in giving so large a gift that she could have easily left her name in a conspicuous memorial, yet preferred to average the sum in a Class pew, and the other, a non-graduate, who with almost as large a gift, submerged her name in adding to the useful but uninteresting necessity of bricks and mortar.

"Therefore, in this momentous year of the bicentennial, when we re-evaluate spiritual assets, there can be no finer work of co-operation than the constructive fellowship of one common body of alumnae, made up of two groups, but moving into higher usefulness as one indivisible Mount Vernon Seminary."

* * * *

Spiritually strengthened and refreshed, the Committee went to work with the following results:

It recommends—

1. The adoption of the use of the term Alumna in its extended sense.
2. The M.V.S. Alumnae Association as the name of the two organizations, the Alumnae Association and the M.V.S. Society when merged.
3. One publication to replace the two; the Annual, first issued in 1887; the Roll Call, first copy in 1913.

Its name to be the Annual-Roll Call, preserving the names of both publications, and therefore hyphenated.

4. Organization.

(a) Senior Members:

Graduates and non-graduates of Mt. Vernon Seminary.

(b) Junior Members:

Student body of the school.

5. Divisional organization.

(a) Washington Chapter including all old girls in Washington; all others not affiliated with any chapter; the present study-body of the school.

(b) Chapters of the M.V.S. Society now functioning which shall automatically become Chapters of the M.V.S. Alumnae Association—namely: The Sara Amelia Scull Chapter, The Harriet Belle Walker, The Omaha, The Jean E. Eddy, The Rhode Island, The Chicago, The Adelia Gates Hensley, The Jean Dean Cole, The Katharine E. Hill, the Chapter of of the Southern States and such other chapters as may be formed in the future.

6. Membership.

(a) Honorary members elected for life—not to exceed twelve in number. These members to receive complimentary copies of the Annual-Roll Call.

(b) Life members by payment of a stipulated amount—to be later agreed upon. Entitled to Annual-Roll Call.

(c) Active—Those who pay dues and who shall receive the Annual-Roll Call.

(d) Non-Active—All other former students of M.V.S. in good standing, but not listed; potentially active.

7. Voting Privileges.

All senior members shall have full voting privileges; the undergraduate members of the Washington Chapter shall enjoy restricted voting privileges—that is, vote only on the disposition of monies given to local Washington charity—as members of the Alumnae Association, but otherwise they shall enjoy their chapter privileges as in any other chapter.

8. Meetings.

- (a) On November 5 or a conveniently near date, all chapters shall meet for consideration of local work and interest and Alumnae interests as well.
- (b) The last Saturday in the school year, the Annual Reunion and Luncheon shall be held in Washington.
- (c) Two business meetings in the Washington Chapter, one in February, the other in April.
- (d) Business meetings in other chapters to be arranged as desired.

9. Dues.

Dues shall be $2.00 a year, a reduction of $1.50 for those previously belonging to both organizations; an increase of $.50 for former members of the M.V.S. Society now entitled to membership in the Alumnae Association.

10. Alumnae Reunion and Luncheon.

Open to graduate and non-graduate members but not for undergraduate students. The Luncheon to be arranged as at present with the dietitian of Mount Vernon Seminary as a member of the Luncheon Committee and a pro rata charge per plate for those attending. This charge to include all expense incurred in connection therewith.

11. Addresses of members.

Corrected addresses only each year. Every third year a full list to be printed in the issue of that year or in a separate booklet. The graduate list shall continue its independent identity as at present in the Annual.

12. Constitution.

The new constitution to preserve inviolate as far as possible the salient features of the two uniting organizations.

* * * *

A questionnaire based on the above recommendations and asking for criticism was sent to members of the M.V.S. Society. These questionnaires were not intended to be sent to students of the school, but owing to a regrettable error in mailing, some were sent to them, while to others who should have received them, went copies of the Roll Call with the questionnaire lacking; later questionnaires were enclosed in invitations to the Alumnae Reunion. Of the 150 responses, 125 were from graduates, 100 in favor and about 20 against the merger. Some of the responses showed a misunderstanding of the issue.

Several years ago, a question was raised in regard to the bestowal of the M.V.S. diploma on a girl who had had two successful years, corresponding to our junior and second years, at a major college. This is not the issue today. The point settled at the Alumnae Reunion in the affirmative was "the use of the term 'alumna' in the larger sense," the first step in a contemplated merging of the M.V.S. Society and the Alumnae Association.

GIFTS

The attractive mahogany table that adds to the beauty of the Faculty Coffee Room is the gift of Marie Reed Granger, whose daughter, Mary Morton, is a member of the graduating class.

Recently the Elizabeth Somers Chapel Committee presented to their Alma Mater 100 metal folding chairs, comfortable, reliable and easily handled for use in the Great Hall on special occasions. Years ago when the Committee had a large sum on hand while the Chapel Fund was accumulating, those wizards of finance, Anne Ames, President, and Cornelia Morgan, Treasurer, invested it in  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent short term Government bonds. No penny contributed for the Chapel was diverted from its destined purpose but the interest was maintained in a separate deposit. It is from this interest that the purchase money for the chairs came, like 100 rabbits from the hat in the hands of a conjurer. Already M.V.S. girls sit down and arise up and call them blessed—both the chairs and the ladies.

Phila Nye, cataloguer of the Index of Christian Art for Princeton University, sent to an M.V.S. Bible Class visited during the Council duplicates of some of her pictures and promises more. Miss Walker begs that a close watch be kept for reproductions of sacred pictures in magazines and art catalogues and that they may be sent to the school for its index of sacred art.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK

At the end of the day on Thursday, May 25, with mingled feelings of gladness and regret, students closed their books, checked off their last assignment sheets and tore off the calendar leaf that marked the end of regular school work. On the next day, May 26, came the usual "School Day Program." Many interesting numbers were presented to demonstrate the work of various classes. "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon," dramatized, gave a small cast of characters opportunity to prove their histrionic abilities as well as their aptitude for French. Jean Evatt read an amusing sketch that brought home to us our every-day reliance upon Latin. Four members of the Expression Class gave a delightful scene from "Little Women." Katherine Thompson read an able essay on modern advertising, while original writings, including fragments of verse, were interspersed throughout the program. Cup and medal awards were made to those who had won distinction in various fields of school activity. The faculty and student body shared a keen delight in the bestowal of the Scholarship Award upon Marguerite Beach and in the presentation of the Mary Vereen Worthy Citizenship Cup to Marianne Hoover. At the end of the morning, Miss Cole gave out certificates to those who had successfully completed the work of the first four years of Mount Vernon Seminary's course of study. She spoke again of Mrs. Somers' remarkable vision in founding, so many years ago, a school on the Junior College principle. Upstairs, an exhibition of typical school work was arranged. In Miss Walker's room was the work done in the studio under Miss Hillyar's direction. In the Study Hall, people gravitated quite naturally toward the attractive doll's house which Marguerite Beach had built to illustrate the thesis of her Senior essay, concerning the tariff and the economic dependence of each unit upon every other unit.

Saturday, the twenty-sixth of May, was dedicated to the friendly reunion of alumnae and to the annual Alumnae Luncheon. There is something ever fresh in the loveliness of the daisied archway that leads to the dining room, and everyone rejoiced that the threatening downpour held off until after the time-honored processional. Mrs. Fairfax made a gracious toastmistress and found a happy way of introducing those who gave personal reminiscences.

The flowers that made the tables lovely were the gift of Mrs. Isabel Ramage Maddox, who with Miss Myers and Miss Allen and their able assistant, Mrs. Baylis of M.V.S., formed the luncheon committee.

The Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday was by Dr. McCartney. A charming touch was given to the service by the choir's rendition of the M.V.S. Creed, set beautifully to music composed by our organist, Mr. Adolph Torovsky, in honor of the occasion.

The evening was a mild and fragrant one—ideal for the cloister supper to which visiting parents were invited. Later the girls and their guests assembled in Great Hall for the group singing that traditionally marks the last Sunday evening at M.V.S.

On Monday evening, May 29, a small cast presented "The Mollusc." Seldom has so finished a play delighted a Mount Vernon Seminary audience. Barbara Beal and Doris Kimball assumed the feminine rôles and carried them with subtlety and poise, while Virginia Dangler, as a dashing bachelor, and Julia Jencks, as a worried husband, did capable and sustained work. The setting for the play was most attractive—the hollyhocks in the garden vista and the well-filled bookcases in the Georgian "interior" having been worked out in Miss Hillyar's studio.

Class Day exercises, on the morning of May 30, proceeded happily as long as the participants could stay indoors, but there was obvious disappointment at the rain's interruption of the bonfire and the tree planting. The class history, song laden, was read by Betty Field, after which came "Statistics," compiled and read by Virginia Dangler. The "Prophecy" came through an imaginary telephone conversation with Barbara Cobb and Barbara Beal at either end of the wire. The Class Will and the bequests made from the generous clothes-basket caused uproarious amusement. Julia Strauss read the Class Poem, and then came time for the abdication of the Senior seats, which reduced the school to the solemnity that is always bred by these final ceremonies.

The Tuesday evening the Treble Clef gave their annual concert. The whole group sang beautifully. Grace Johnson's soprano voice was lovely in several selections, and Schubert's "Cradle Song," sung by Grace Johnson, Edith Ferguson, and Betty Rogers, was especially appealing. Flora Kaiser and Dorothy Fox graciously sang with the Treble Clef. Miss Winston accompanied with her usual artistry. Julia Strauss, Mary Morton Granger and Helen Searle gave instrumental variation to the program of vocal numbers.

On Wednesday morning, May 31, the Commencement ceremonies took place in the Elizabeth Somers Memorial Chapel. An agreeable, summery morning meant that the procession could wind its way to the gates, hang there the memorial wreaths for Mrs. Hensley, cross the lawn to the chapel and place Mrs. Somers' garlands at either side of the portal before entering the sanctuary. Music for the occasion was furnished by the National String Quartet, with Mr. Torovsky assisting at the organ in the rendition of Handel's "Largo." Dr. Sizoo, in his address to the Seniors, spoke eloquently. His message was one of strength and inspiration, and the clarity and force of what he had to say is sure to abide in the hearts of his listeners.

Miss Cole, in presenting the diplomas to the Class of 1933, spoke of the two honor students, Marguerite Beach and Mary Hurd. After the benediction and recessional, the informal reception of the Seniors took place in Great Hall, where sorrowfully the fifteen girls of this year's graduating class bade adieu to their devoted friends and their Alma Mater. The school will miss them deeply and will follow them affectionately wherever they may go.

THE ALUMNAE REUNION

The Annual Reunion of the Mount Vernon Seminary Alumnae Association was held in the Great Hall of the School on Saturday, May 27, the President in the Chair.

Helen Myers Class of 1907 presented the graduating class and Miss Foerderer welcomed them. She said in part:

"Your individual experiences in school life have doubtless given ample evidence of the truth 'He conquers all who conquers self' and you will have reason to be increasingly grateful, as you assume your respective places in the world before you, that so vital a fact has been so wisely recognized, so significantly emphasized. If lessons of self conquest have here been learned we are certain you can meet worthily and with steadfast courage the mightier demands and grave conditions of the life on which you are entering for great reserve power comes to one who first masters himself."

Miss Cole then called the roll, the members giving their names in acknowledgment.

The Silver Class, 1908, was represented by Helen Unger Brown, Marguerite Weller Hynson, Sybil Dugan Dillman and Emma Tebbutt Peck. There was no representative for the Jubilee Class, 1883.

The minutes of the previous meeting were then read and approved. The Corresponding Secretary's report was accepted with appreciation.

The report of the Treasurer followed and was filed for audit.

The Merger was then introduced. The President spoke to the point, stressing the wisdom of keeping "large things large" and reaffirming her belief that the union of the two organizations—Alumnae Association and M.V.S. Society—would result in greater strength and enlarged opportunity for service. She then gave three definitions of the word alumna, for the question before the meeting was this definite one: "The use of the word alumna in the larger sense." From the Century: a female pupil; a graduate of any educational institution. Webster: a foster-daughter; a female ward or pupil, especially a graduate of a school, college, etc.

Oxford: the nursling or pupil of any school, university or other seat of learning.

To open discussion Helen Unger Brown made the following motion:

"I move that the word alumna be used in the larger sense and include graduates and non-graduates of the school." Seconded.

Miss Walker reporting for the Merger Committee, of which she was Chairman, gave the history of the movement (found elsewhere under heading "The Merger").

Miss Cole then addressed with feeling the assembly emphasizing the value of a united body of M.V.S. girls working for the welfare of the school they loved.

Silence followed, for her hearers were deeply moved. Even those who had come to veto the proposition realized that they would still possess that prized diploma, the sign of graduation, the reward of two years of honest effort, that they would lose nothing but gain much in comradeship, breadth, vision, harmony.

A few constructive questions were asked and answered and the motion, put—was passed without a dissenting sound.

Miss Cole spoke of her delightful tour—her warm welcome; and of the Council urging all who may be in Washington next April to attend.

Miss Walker made the following motion:

"I move that the present officers of the M.V.S. Alumnae Association continue to function until their successors be elected on Founder's Day." Seconded and carried.

Mary Bradford Stone moved that "A committee, empowered to act, be appointed by the President of this Alumnae Association to join with a similar committee from the M.V.S. Society in perfecting plans for the merging of the two organizations." Seconded and carried.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned to meet on Founder's Day in joint session with the M.V.S. Society to perfect plans, constitution and by-laws for the new Alumnae Association.

MARIE STEWART LABAT,
Recording Secretary.

ASSEMBLY PROGRAMS

The Wednesday Assemblies for 1932-1933 were in the hands of a Faculty committee consisting of Miss Nourse, Miss Hanna and the indefatigable and efficient chairman, Miss Elting.

Those, preceding election, were devoted to a discussion of the issues at stake, the Headquarters of the various parties sending out women to present their respective causes.

Mrs. Howard continued her monthly current event reports and more extended discussions of critical problems were presented by special speakers. Mr. E. G. Nourse, Director of Brookings Institution, explained "Where all the money had gone"; Mr. David Lawrence, editor of the United States Weekly, told of the gold standard and its development from the system of barter; Mrs. Otto Beyer, of the Children's Bureau, dealt with its collection and dissemination of valuable information, for instance, child labor, just now an acute problem; Miss Pearl Paulsen, of the Child Guidance Clinic, gave details of some particular cases brought to her attention.

Dr. Harrison Howe took as his theme the uses of cellulose products, displayed silks of varied hues and many other compositions now produced by the magic of chemistry.

The girls were interested too in Mrs. B. B. Wallace's account of present-day China and her pictures of life in Chinese schools—and not less so in Miss Temple's illustrations showing "The Story of Wall Paper."

Two delightful mornings of music fittingly conclude the summary. The Friday Morning Club met in the Chapel and invited us to join them in listening to a program of music by Mr. Torovsky, organist of the Church of the Epiphany and of the Elizabeth Somers Memorial Chapel. He was assisted by a brilliant young violinist, Milton Schwartz. On April 12 the students and faculty were privileged to hear in their own chapel, Dubois' "Seven Last Words of Christ," sung by the Choir from Howard University. The thrill of hearing these negro singers under the inspired direction of their leader, Miss Childers, was one to be long cherished. The beauty and reverence of this morning service was a fitting prelude to Holy Week.

MILDRED HANNA.

THE POWER TEST

Readers of the Roll Call are familiar with the attitude of the school towards the traditional examinations and its preference for the use of the project in the place of the factual content test. A further experiment in this direction has been tried this year with the introduction of the Power Test.

For some time past Miss Cole had hoped that the time would come when we would evolve a method whereby we could measure the ability of the student to meet an unexpected problem, study it, and bring to its solution the knowledge and techniques of independent thinking and research. A faculty committee of five members, appointed to prepare such a test, decided that it should be comprehensive enough to cover various fields of study; that it must present opportunities to demonstrate an awareness of the interrelationships between courses; that it must test ability to obtain and develop material other than that found in textbooks and at the same time allow full play for individuality in its development: a task of no mean order, as the committee discovered when it began to work towards this objective.

The nature of the problem was kept secret both from the other members of the faculty and from the student body until the days appointed for the test, in order that there should be no preliminary discussion or preparation.

It was announced that all work would stop in the Junior College for three days. During that time the student was free to visit any of the libraries, public offices or other avenues of information in Washington; she could use the printed word, converse with authorities in the fields she thought were touched upon by the problem presented, or she could, if she wished, call upon personal experiences that would help in arriving at a solution; but under no circumstances could she confer with faculty members. A copy of the problem was then handed to each student (one for the Senior class, and a second and simpler one for the Juniors). Some time was spent in reading and discussing the problem, and by lunch time of the first day work began. There was a general exodus from the college and the students went to the libraries or the national bureaus in the city in search of information. The last day was used for the composition of the theme.

Each theme was read in turn by each of the five members of the committee and then evaluated at a committee meeting. This meant a great deal of work, but the committee's findings in spite of this are perhaps the best commentary upon the success of the experiment; they were as follows:

"The Committee recommends continuance of the Power Test on the following grounds:

That it—

1. Teaches the intelligent use of books in research and
2. The correct method of assembling and organizing material.
3. Causes the student to realize the scope of problems that confront thinking people.
4. Develops initiative.
5. Provides opportunity for self-criticism.
6. Shows that a certain joy is inherent in sharing the solution of a problem."

In evaluating the test, the effect upon the students should not be overlooked. They entered into the scheme with zest; many expressed dissatisfaction with their own accomplishment at the end of three days and felt they had learned much about division and use of time, how to use both libraries and books with greater purpose; almost all admitted to genuine enjoyment of the experience.

Out of this experiment developed an interesting consequence. The Power Test, belonging to no special department, received no academic credit. Some of the papers submitted showed such outstanding ability and evidence of the tremendous amount of work that had gone into their composition that the committee felt that they were deserving of recognition.

It was therefore recommended, and accepted by the faculty, that should a student obtain distinction in the power test, write an outstanding Senior essay, and in addition maintain an excellent record in class work and citizenship, such an achievement should entitle a student to graduation with honors. Two students, Miss Marguerite Beach and Miss Mary Hurd, succeeded in attaining such very creditable records this year.

Of much significance has been the manifestation of keen interest in academic achievement by the student body in the past year. At the second faculty meeting a letter from student representatives was read requesting that the academic faculty assist the student members of the Privilege List Committee by recommending to them each month students who had maintained work of such high quality that they were both entitled to, and could afford to have, further privileges than those granted to the average student.

This action of the student body has had wide-reaching effects. To this general desire to improve academic standing, Optima members felt that they must respond, and in consequence, the members of Optima made changes in their entrance requirements.

Perhaps nothing is more encouraging for the future of the school than this spontaneous action of the student body whereby voluntarily they as a group deprived themselves of privileges that otherwise might have been theirs, in order that the institutions within the school, especially created to stimulate high academic achievement, should really fulfill this purpose. Such a public-spirited and long-sighted action on the part of the student body has been an inspiration to the faculty concerned and promises well for the future.

GEORGE LLOYD.

THE SECONDARY SCHOOL

We aim to develop each student to his fullest capacity.

Goals

- (a) To awaken and develop intellectual curiosity.
- (b) To teach a student to think independently and to be able to form judgments based on such thought and investigation.
- (c) To worthily use his leisure time.
- (d) To develop an appreciation of all that is best in the arts.
- (e) To provide opportunity for the release of creative energies.
- (f) To develop a sense of social responsibility.
- (g) To establish such ethical qualities in character as would enable a student with wisdom and vision to shape a philosophy of life.

IN MEMORIAM

IRENE ROSENFELD STRAUSS

The Editor records with a deep sense of personal loss the tragic passing of Irene Rosenfield Strauss, due to an automobile accident when returning from Greenwich to Katonah, N.Y.

Her condition was critical from the start—death came after days of unconsciousness on June thirtieth. Herself a member of the M.V.S. of long ago, her fellowship had been renewed recently in her daughter's years as Junior and Senior—for Julia graduated in May.

Merry, generous, considerate, tactful, sincere, she was beloved by a large circle of friends who grieve with her husband and daughter in their sore bereavement.

DOROTHY JUDSON SHEPARD

The Class of 1920 announces with sadness the death of a beloved member, Dorothy Judson, Mrs. Wallace E. Shepard, on October 24, 1932.

A resident of Omaha, she had from its beginning been an active worker in the M.V.S. Society chapter in that city. After her marriage she moved to Pittsburgh and joined the S. A. Scull Chapter in which, because of her interest and loyalty, she made an enviable place for herself.

Kindly, sincere and generous in nature she endeared herself to her classmates and to a large circle of friends who sincerely mourn their loss and lament her early passing.

DEATHS

1932

- October. Mr. Chester W. Haskins, husband of Dorothy Lacy, '21.
December 2. Mrs. James O'Donnell, mother of Mrs. Thomas F. Maher (Florence O'Donnell '17).
December. Mrs. John Willing, mother of Dorothy Willing '06.
December. Mrs. H. P. Ellis, mother of Alberta Ellis '07.
December 17. Mrs. Charles S. Kilbourne, mother of Mrs. W. Burr Gregg (Dorothy Kilbourne '21).

1933

- January 18. Mrs. A. G. Wilkinson, mother of Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins (Marie Wilkinson '86).
January. Dr. Henry A. Fitch, father of Jean Fitch '06.
February 17. Mr. William A. Pope, father of Mrs. Herbert E. A. Dorée (Elizabeth Pope '22).
February 23. Mrs. Hiram Reeve Kelsey, mother of Mrs. J. D. Biggers (Mary Kelsey '08), Mrs. Russell Cooke (Alice Kelsey '09), Mrs. Charles A. Beck (Grace Kelsey '14), and Mrs. James K. Angell (Florence Kelsey '15).
——. Mrs. Thomas A. Phillips, mother of Mrs. Charles H. Johnson (Grace Phillips '97).
March. Mr. Mitchell Hoyt, husband of Emma Patten '05.
March 26. Mr. Franklin Pierce Weller, father of Mrs. Richard W. Hynson (Marguerite Weller '08).
March 30. Major Hobart H. Hawkins, husband of Luella Peck '93.
April 17. Mr. Roger Simpson Hurd, husband of Vera Clemes '11 and father of Dorothy Hurd.
——. Mr. Hugh McDaniel Scott, husband of Emily Winship '11.
June 19. Mr. Harris William Slater, brother of Helen Slater Mallory '98.

M.V.S. VISITORS

Florence Bontjes Newell was a luncheon guest at the school in February.

Shirley Stevens made a hurried call en route from Atlanta, Ga., to New Rochelle, N.Y., where she has recently moved.

Isabelle Gregory called while in Washington on her way from the south to her Albany home.

Mrs. Dallis and Palmer joined Epsie (now in school) for her spring vacation in New York.

Ruth Kransz Reiss visited M.V.S. during the Easter Vacation and was thrilled at the many delightful changes made there since her student days.

Bonnie Manatrey Hughes, a student in 1904-1905, had her first glimpse of the new M.V.S. in April when she called with Mr. and Mrs. Jencks of Topeka, Kansas, to see their daughter Julia.

Peggy Huxley spent several days at M.V.S. after her mid-year examination at Sweet Briar.

Arline Yergason Serviss, in the city for the D.A.R. Congress, made a short call.

Crosby Walding and a group of friends, among them an aunt of Fidelia Mills Wallace, while motoring, gave her friends among the Faculty a delightful surprise. She brought news from Toledo, where it is hoped a Chapter of the New Alumnae Association will be formed ere long.

Margaret Conklin, while visiting her aunt in Washington during the Easter Vacation, was another welcome caller.

Katharine Higgins Riley, of Worcester, was Miss Cole's delightful guest at Gatesley, in January. For three years, Mrs. Riley has presided ably and with charm at the M.V.S. Council.

Elsie Foerderer is an ideal Alumnae Association president. During the several years she has held that office she has attended not only the Reunion but every business meeting but one, coming from her home in Philadelphia. Deeply interested in the classwork and in the girls themselves, she has made an enviable place for herself in the life of the school.

Elsie, Anne Dugan Field, Sybil Dugan Dillman, Helen Unger Brown and Grace Unger Masters, formed a particularly happy group during Commencement Week; the central interest of all being two members of the graduating class—Doris Masters and Betty Field. Doris' mother had the pleasure of being a guest at the Reunion Luncheon, due to the enlarged use of the term "alumnae." It would have been trying indeed to know the daughter and aunt present and the mother excluded on that great occasion.

Sue Schriber and Elsie Nelson were cordially welcomed guests in May, to their great regret just missing the Great Falls Picnic.

WHITE PANSIES

Someone gave me—long ago—
Pansies that were white as snow.
Since that time they mean to me
Little dreams that could not be.
Love, first love, as pure, as white—
As the pansies to my sight.

HELEN BLODGETT ERWIN '15.

HEATHER

These sprigs of heather yesterday
Upon the wide moor grew.
Today in vase of porcelain blue,
On littered London desk-top, they Are city-prisoned, too.

They have exchanged the hum of bee
For motor bus's roar.
Yet here, behind our office door,
They hold in frail captivity
The silence of the moor.

The tiny buds just opening
Look for the ferns in vain.
Out there rosebay and gorse remain.
Yet now our feet go sauntering
On flowering moor again.

Their breath of bracken-scented air
The leaves give secretly.
But none within the room can see
The slender hands that plucked them there
Upon the moor, for me.

GRACE WARREN STURGE,
Member of Faculty 1918-1922.

PERSONALS

M.V.S. girls, faculty and particularly the Class of 1930 (Eleanor Bovenizer, President), who inaugurated the project, will rejoice to learn that during July Miss Cole "will sit for her portrait." She has chosen as the artist Mr. Frank Salisbury, an English painter of note who has been particularly successful with his portraits of American educators.

The Editor grieves to record the sore bereavements in the Faculty the past winter. To Miss Hanna, in the death of a beloved mother; later Miss Pearson was summoned suddenly on the same sad errand. Miss Elting's sister, Mrs. Ziemen, passed away after a lingering illness, while again Miss Hill's family circle was broken, in the death of her brother-in-law, Mr. Alan E. McLane.

Katherine Cable '32 entered Mt. Holyoke College with fifty-six semester hours of credit for the work which she offered from Mount Vernon Seminary. "She stood near the head of her class the past year—exceedingly satisfactory student," the registrar writes, "and will undoubtedly enter the Senior Class" in the fall of '33.

Louise Doyle enters the Senior Class at Smith next year. She majored in European History and just loves it. "Can you guess"—she asks her M.V.S. teacher—"where I learned to love history?"

Kate Ross Patton '32 entered Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, this year with advanced Sophomore standing. Her finals conflicted with Commencement and prevented her return for her first reunion.

Lee Patterson Smith:

Since living in New York, I have seen no M.V.S. girls but Margery and Katherine Hill. The latter had a new book out in November. Helen has written a series of children's books which Houghton Mifflin has published and she lives on the Riviera. Margery is the very good-looking and grown-up head assistant of the Cathedral Branch of the New York Public Library, at Lexington Avenue and 50th Street. But after all we are all very grown-up now, aren't we? And reading the Roll Call about 1100 M, Frau Professor Naumann and all the old days, I feel like a child again!

I have not looked up the M.V.S. Society yet. Fort Hamilton is far out; I have four good live reasons for keeping busy at home, beside I have D.A.R., musical activities and Army Post Life—not all contract and dancing and polo. Last week I sent in fifty finished garments we, on the Post, had made for the Red Cross unemployment relief for which we sew all the time and on Thursdays particularly in groups.

Do you remember the old Physics Laboratory—and your Bible history and weekly spelling class?

It was all very serious business and yet great fun in those days with Evelyn Walsh in Parisian finery of "the gay nineties" and Marjorie Post's mother delighted but shocked at the lovely lingerie she was buying for Marjorie's trousseau. And Helen Hibbs driving to school in a red-wheeled tandem cart, a Merry Widow hat catching the breeze as gaily as a sail—great fun, all of it, and how I hope my Betty may have one year at M.V.S. when the time comes!

Bessie Bailey Capron:

Last August my husband and I on our return from a motor trip to Quebec paused for several hours in the little town of Peacham in Vermont. That was the birthplace of Mr. Frank Gould of Evanston, the father of my M.V.S. roommate. Elsie and her husband, Mr. George Work, motored from their present home in Barre, Mass., about 175 miles to join us at luncheon and for a three-hour "talk-fest." It was delightful to meet in that little New England village, so full of interest to the four of us.

Note the M.V.S. thread.

Virginia Harris '28 assisted June eighth at a tea in Washington in which Julia Matheson, M.V.S. student of '31, shared honors with a Miss Louise Tompkins. The tea was given by Miss Alice Fleming, niece of India Bell Fleming Bailey '06. Julia was married June 29 to Mr. Potter Arnold and Miss Tompkins to Andrew Parker, son of Rena Woodward Parker, a member of our beloved Woodward trio.

Mary Louise Succop sends this little news letter:

Jane Wehr won first prize in a contest sponsored by the Junior League for designing an invitation cover. In the fall Jane is going to Pennsylvania College for Women, where Bertha Dunbar and Margaret Meanor will return as Juniors.

Lucile Hartje Rogers and her husband had a winter holiday in the West Indies. When Pittsburgh weather became too unkind, Louise Johnston Herron and Frances Johnston betook themselves to Pinehurst.

Marie Porter Bell's son Dick was graduated in June from Shady Side Academy and received the highest of honor awards in both academics and athletics.

Monica Kaspar, granddaughter of Professor Josef Kaspar and the late Mme. Annie Roemer Kaspar, both for many years connected with the Music Department of M.V.S., and niece of Francesca Kaspar Lawson, is now visiting her maternal grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Leeper, in Melbourne, Australia. She is attending Trinity College of the University of Melbourne of which Dr. Leeper is Dean Emeritus. Monica was one of a group of eleven invited by the former High Commissioner (from Australia) and Mrs. Herbert Brookes to make her debut at the "coming-out party" of their daughter Jessie.

Dr. John Lesh Jacobs married in June into an M.V.S. family. His bride was Marjorie Evatt, his mother-in-law Evelyn Miller Evatt, his new sisters Catherine Evatt Barnum '28, Emily Evatt Brown and Jean Evatt, all M.V.S. girls.

Eleanor Hutton, daughter of Marjorie Post Hutton, was married in Paris on May fourth to Mon. Etienne Marie Robert Gautier.

From Miss Keller in a personal letter to the Editor:

"On my back all but four hours a day I look out at the sunlight on the slope to the college wood or, on the other side out into the apple tree, that now is like a tapestry of blossoms and say to myself—'It is wonderful to have all this beauty.' I have constant flowers, it is like a miracle all these years, that anyone should be left to bring such a long-lifer flowers. I long to see the dogwood white among the pines, Rock Creek Park, Great Falls of the Potomac by way of a canal boat as of old and to see all of you.

Please give my love to anyone who would care for it. If there are any of the old servants left, I should like them to know that I remember them."

The past winter, Grace Smith has had an unusually full schedule in social service "which is fascinating," she says, "but accounts for my absence from M.V.S. functions."

Marion Lilley Taylor missed the Reunion and the Reunion missed her because she made an usually early start for her summer home in Connecticut.

Rosemary Ames, wife of a London theatrical manager, is under contract with British talkie concerns and will be featured in several forthcoming productions.

Dr. Marion Shephard has resigned her position as physician to girls on the staff of the Student Health Service at Pittsburgh to accept a similar post in the public schools of Kenmore, N.Y.

Elsie Gould Work and her husband while visiting Bessie Bailey Capron in February, celebrated the thirty-seventh anniversary of their wedding day.

Anne Rafferty Trent took the Mediterranean trip in September, accompanied by her two sons who have been studying in Paris.

Gladys Brace Heckert has received flattering press notices of her two poetic plays, "Rosamond" and "Simonetha."

The annual concert of the Elizabeth Somers (Y.W.C.A.) Glee Club occurred during the Christmas Holiday, which made a large attendance from M.V.S. impossible.

Grace Marks Mitchell found on her return to her plantation at Bayamon, Porto Rico, a scene of havoc—house and contents badly damaged, crops and orchards almost a total loss. A like destructive storm from which it was just recovering had visited the island a year or two ago.

"Vira Vista," published in April, was written by Mr. Edgcomb Pinchon, husband of Elise Dufour. An able critic pronounces it delightful. "The style is sparkling, chaste and forceful." It has already been selected for presentation as a movie.

Georgia Gray Hencken had a gala June. On the seventeenth her parents celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day and on the third her daughter Georgia was married to Mr. George Holmes Perkins.

From Frau Professor Naumann in Berlin:

"It is a joy for me to read the Annual. It lies on my desk. When I open it, I first greet Elsie's picture. It is exactly the way I knew her; her wonderful brown eyes seem to speak. It brings back the beautiful times I spent in M.V.S., so free from care."

The Editor's request brought this inspiring response from Olive Waring '05:

"These times are making us appreciate the permanent values in life among which the influences and friendships of M.V.S. stand out in clear relief.

"Mother and I have a lovely little home on a hillside overlooking our garden city and the distant sea. My school life fascinates me, as always. About 95 per cent of our student body (2500 strong) at Hollywood High School are of splendid, achieving calibre. Our newspaper was given national first place among 600, by the judges at Columbia University, a year or so ago. Our Annual is rated A-1, also in the national contest; our R.O.T.C. has been an Honor School eight out of the last nine years. You would thrill at the Christmas welfare work we do. Mr. Cadman has said nowhere has he seen any school opera of an equal quality to those we put on. And so, you see, how happy I must be in this throbbing, enthusiastic world of young people. If we only had time for more individual work, I should be happier!

"My field is your own. I am teaching World History, Civics and Pan Pacific History. Isn't it all stimulating? You ask also about myself. I am enjoying being on the Faculty Scholarship Committee, being one of the advising members of the Student Body Board of Control and being on the All-Faculty World Friendship Committee and lastly I have completed my Master's Degree at the University of Southern California."

Three one-act plays written by May Libbey '99 were the main feature of a children's program presented by Friendship House Clubs in April.

Lois Mayer wrote in May of gardening early and late varied by horseback riding. Maitland's latest review is "Design of Living." She is much in demand and of course is constantly adding to her repertoire.

Caroline Malott '13 is slowly recovering from a long illness—her M.V.S. friends send best wishes for entire and speedy restoration to health.

Helen Fay Dunn '13:

"Major Dunn is extremely busy. His district is a large one and the Florida gulf-coast canal project is making him work overtime. I miss Washington. Florida is a grand place to visit, but being a true Northerner, I love the winter weather and the breathtaking loveliness of the first spring days."

Mary Prince Zimmerman '16, in June:

"Just leaving with my husband and twelve-year-old son for two months in Germany and Switzerland—our first trip abroad. In deference to Old Man Depression we are going tourist and driving ourselves."

Katherine Gibson still finds sculpture perfectly fascinating and instructors most interesting, but feels that there is too much loveliness in such an art for one small mind to grasp. She sticks to her chisel, however, since each day's work in itself is so richly worthwhile.

Helen Scott Jaccard '13 spent the holidays in San Diego with her mother—"a strange experience in a land all blue, glamorous and fragrant with distant views of snow-covered mountains across green valleys."

Jessie Clark '28:

"We were in Italy from September until June, in Rome save for seven weeks in Florence. Rome is the most delightful place in the world to live. We met hundreds of people of different nationalities and had a royal time socially as well as intellectually and historically. Of course with three girls of different ages in a family it is not hard to make contacts. I did a lot of sight-seeing and studied Italian—hard. Constance went to an English school and Margot to a French one—with my Italian slant thrown in, we all acquired various and interesting perspectives on how the other half of the world thinks and acts."

Eleanor Dwight and family had an invitation to visit in England this summer. Their friends have a home in Braydon Forest in Wiltshire which used to be a hunting lodge of Henry the Eighth. "We shall go to England anyway; then I shall be married when we get back." As she was married in June—she may have changed her mind. Mr. Mason graduated from Brown and received his M.A. from Harvard. He is a professor of history at Stevens Institute of Technology.

Barbara Allen Cox has gone to Los Angeles to live, where she will be warmly welcomed by the Jean Dean Cole Chapter. Shirley Ross and Ainslee Puhl of the Class of '31 were guests at her wedding in December.

Katharine Meyer '32 is studying at the Albright Art Gallery School of Art.

Rosana Kilpatrick and Virginia Shumate are at the University of California.

Ilma Jane Theurer is a valued volunteer worker in the Children's Memorial Hospital at Chicago.

Alice Stone Farmer is now a member of the New York organization, N. F. Charlock & Co., Inc., Insurance Brokers, having forsaken the book business for insurance in all its branches.

Anne Baggs Koehne was quite ill for some time last year. She returned in June from a winter in Porto Rico where the mild climate did her a world of good.

Kitty Cable writes of the loveliness of spring at Mt. Holyoke but regrets that she and Louise Raynor because of college missed their first M.V.S. Reunion.

Stella Ford Schlotman spent last summer most delightfully at Mr. Schlotman's Salmon Stream in eastern Quebec—a continuous house party. In April she found at her sister Nell's "lovely Paradise near Savannah—a perfect haven of peace in this time of stress and strain."

Jean Syminton, March 15:

This last week-end was quite hectic. My family are in Los Angeles and of course the earthquake was too near not to make me anxious. I have heard now that they are all well. Both our chimneys are down and a few walls cracked. They spent Friday and Saturday nights sleeping, in their day-clothes, on chaise-longues in the library so as to be able to dash out of the house. Tommy wrote there were fifty-six minor shocks Friday night, or one about every fifteen minutes!

Alvin M. Owsley, husband of Lucy Ball, was recently appointed by the President as Minister to Rumania.

The Ball Brothers, father and uncles of Lucy and Margaret, are staging a great canning contest at Aurora, Ill., in the fall. Second in the list of judges to decide winners for the $8,000.00 in prizes is Fanny Walker Yeatman, junior specialist in foods in the Bureau of Home Economics, who accompanies her chief, Dr. Louise Stanley, as a representative of the Department of Agriculture.

Miss Guard, Mrs. Murphey and Miss Walker were delighted auditors at the University of Maryland one sunny day when Annabel Baggeley Hine talked about the arrangement of flowers—illustrating her suggestions most charmingly. On her return to her home in Short Hills, N.J., she sent to the Library a copy of her book, "The Arrangement of Flowers," with its fifty prize-winning examples from photographs. Home and Field describes it as a volume which every person should own who desires to use floral material to the best advantage, and quite the best book for the enthusiastic amateur.

Ruth Sherwood Sykes since October has been president of the Niagara Falls Service League. The League co-operates with every welfare agency in the community; sponsors Red Cross lectures on hospital ethics and provides that organization with a volunteer motor corps. Since 1906 Ruth has enjoyed a summer home at Massawepie Lake, a preserve of 800 acres in the Adirondacks. She, her doctor husband and three children tramp through the woods, canoe, swim and fish in the preserve's seven lakes.

Janet Gardner Hawes in June was way out "in Tucson recuperating from a bad sinus attack. My husband, mother and daughter (eight months old and too adorable) are here with me."

Miss Hempstead has a depression hobby, collecting different varieties of ferns. "You have only to agree with the farmer that he is a little worse off than any one else and his woods are open to you—and if you chance to find a new fern you feel as if you had found a million dollars." These treasure troves are planted beside a spring. The lovely spot has a lovely name, "Fons Amicitia." Miss Hempstead, because of her hobby, has become an authority on ferns and in demand as a speaker.

The winter has been a sad one for Katharine Meyer—since the death of her beloved grandmother, after a two months' illness. "I have occupied myself," she writes, "with work in the Junior League. Lucile Donaldson spent her Easter Vacation with me; we had a grand time talking over our M.V.S. days but to our regret could not arrange to return for Commencement Week."

Marianne Stevenson is doing preliminary work for the German Reception Committee in connection with the Century of Progress. "My job for the summer is to escort various German visitors at various times through the Fair and act as interpreter. I have to brush up on German—learn all about the Fair, which in itself is a colossal task. I receive my degree on the twelfth of June."

Mme. Florence Holtzman was guest and feature speaker at the Tenth Anniversary Luncheon of the Lyric Art Society given at the Plaza Hotel in New York, November ninth, when 250 people were her appreciative auditors.

A new chapter of the M.V.S. Society was formed when Miss Cole visited Atlanta. It was named "The Chapter of the Southern States," and has as its officers: Regent, Palmer Dallis; Vice-Regent, Katharine Howell Cooper; Recording Secretary, Martha Lewis Kemp; and Treasurer, Agnes Long Gee.

The K. E. Hill is growing so fast and showing such enthusiasm that it cannot possibly object to being no longer the baby in the family.

Kathryn Hawkes graduated from Cornell in June. Sally, who is now at Sea Pines Camp, Brewster, Mass., took a week off for the important event.

Mildred Joy Robertson '15:

There have been a number of opportunities to address groups on Conservation in Iowa, using slides of the State parks which help considerably. Some of these I have had made, some are rented from the Visual Education Department of the State University, and some have been graciously loaned by the Board of Conservation.

I go tonight to Mount Pleasant, June Seeley's old home, to appear before the Kiwanis Club there, and hope after the meeting to take initial steps in effecting an organization known as "The American Green Cross," which is the offspring of a British movement of similar name, and which as the name suggests is a mass movement throughout the United States for conservation. It is organized in local chapters, and the National Headquarters happen to be at Davenport, Iowa.

Fay Wilson '30:

"Mary (my sister) and I are sailing on June twenty-first for eight weeks in Austria. I to study music at the Mondsee Conservatory and Mary international affairs at the Mondsee Institute, later going to Geneva. We are thrilled of course. Our plans were made unexpectedly and we have but three days before leaving for New York."

For the following news items the Annual is indebted to Catherine Evatt Barnum '28, an Ideal Class President who returned for her Fifth Reunion.

Eleanor Miller spent the winter in New York City, taking a course in Appreciation of Art yet giving many hours to charity work in the hospitals.

Katherine Archibald is connected with an importing house in Daytona Beach.

Virginia Harris studied abroad last summer and on her return resumed her piano lessons with Mrs. Rickett.

Anne Hearne's position necessitated her absence from her Fifth Reunion; a position is a position these days, but Anne was sincerely missed by her friends.

Marie Horst Kassler is living in the country near Princeton, N.J., and well content, with her dog and a lovely old house, not to mention Mr. Kassler.

The friends of Mary Pope will be grieved to hear of the death of her mother, at one time herself a student at M.V.S. Mary is again in Walla Walla, living with her uncle and aunt.

Martha Fitton Whyte, when family cares are not too pressing, works enthusiastically for the Junior League.

Shirley Hobbins has traveled extensively since her graduation from the University of Wisconsin.

Esther Goetz has been studying art in New York.

The most thrilling thing Dorothea Sigel did last winter in Geneva was to study modelling with a very fine sculptor. "I learned more under his eagle eye than I would have learned in two years in an Art School."

Mildred Williamson Johnston:

Can you imagine my joyous surprise when Frau Professor Naumann told me very casually that when in Washington she lived at Mt. Vernon Seminary? Her eyes filled when I caught my breath and told her, "I am an M.V.S. girl." Immediately she asked if I knew Harriet Belle Walker and Lorna Guard. It was my turn to weep. It was one of those great moments that come to us.

We had five wonderful months in London with Christmas in Edinburgh. I took courses in Art History at the Courtland Institute. It's a perfect place, a choice example of Adam architecture with everything in perfect harmony from doorknobs to monumental staircase. It was a great privilege to be there in the first year of the Institute. To catch my breath between museums and pre-fire churches I took some embroidery lessons at the Royal School of Needlework. I shall never qualify to do an altar frontal, but I can recognize a few stitches now. It was all such fun. We were in England long enough to see the daffodils. A kind spring came two weeks early.

When we reached Holland, we found the fields blue, pink and yellow with hyacinths, tulips and daffodils. We had Easter in the much painted church in Harlem. The Reformation seemed very real there, where not one flower decorated the church and the pulpit is in a side aisle. It was quite a contrast to Ely, where we spent Palm Sunday.

Here in Berlin I need not tell you that I am feasting my soul on the beautifully arranged museum group, "The Altar of Pergamon." Today I went through historical private rooms of the Castle. In Frederick the Great's exquisite Writing Room I went back to your classroom and your assignments in Carlton Hayes. I was off on a cloud before Watteau's "Embarkation for Cythera" when a guide tapped my shoulder and told me they were closing the room. It was a staggering drop from my pink cloud to the rainy courtyard. We expect to be in Berlin five more weeks, then to Dresden, Prague and Vienna and Geneva for about a month—to Paris, to Madrid possibly and home in the late fall.

One of the happy and unexpected events of the late spring was a charming lecture entitled, "Red Paint and Butterflies," given to the Seniors and Faculty by Madame Eulabee Dix. Madame Dix is a painter of exquisite miniatures, a collection of which was shown for several weeks at the Corcoran Art Gallery. She spoke most graciously and instructively on the art of the miniature, mingling history and anecdote with a charming ease. Her lecture was a gift to the graduating class, bestowed upon them by the artist herself. The warmth of response measured the appreciation felt by the girls, of this quite rare opportunity to hear of a too-little-known field in art.

The Editor is most grateful to Helen Myers for the accurate and complete list of Alumnae names and addresses compiled by her this year—and many other years; to Miss Hill for her data of various kinds; to Miss Willis for the hours spent over her records in forming a just mailing list; to contributors among the M.V.S. Faculty and to those, many personally dear, who have been looking Backward with her and reliving never-to-be-forgotten days.

There have been about 1000 members in the Alumnae Association. Of these 573 are on file as having paid within the last five years (since 1928).

Paid three times and more from 1888 to 1928, 102 members.

To these 675 and to the honorary members, Annuals are being sent this year. It is not being sent to the 178 who have paid but three times or less in the forty-five years of its existence, nor to the seven who have asked the Treasurer to close their accounts.

For 40 members we have no addresses. In that period 92 members have died.
